Gen. New's Big Day.
Foaming Beer, Full Pocket.

Sad for Burglars.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WHEN Postmaster-General New wisely reduced air mail charges to five cents for a one-ounce letter, it was suggested here that advertisers help our air service and attract attention by utilizing the air mail.

On Tuesday, in Lansing, Mich., the Reo Motor Car Company sent out ten tons of air mail advertising by the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation.

On the 350,000 one-ounce letters the government collected $17,500. It took 18 airships to carry the letters 175 miles to Chicago, whence the letters were distributed to far western points by other airplanes.

ORDINARY advertising by mail is waste. It costs five to forty times more than newspaper or magazine advertising per person reached. In addition, advertising mail matter is usually thrown into the waste basket.

But everybody opens an air mail letter, thinks about it, reads what's in it.

Use air mail in your business and promote flying.

THOMAS F. HEALY tells Cyrus H. K. Curtis that the fight between Hoover and Smith is a fight between "the foaming beer bucket and the full dinner pail."

The beer bucket is a big issue undoubtedly, also the non-foaming hip flask. But in these days of high wages the old-fashioned "full dinner pail" has lost importance.

The full POCKETBOOK is the modern issue.

THE court of Baku, Azerbaijan, if you know just where that is, supplies a plot that would have delighted Edgar Allan Poe.

A beautiful girl, very rich, was chained to the floor in a subterranean passage for four years by an uncle and cousin, who wanted her money.

The uncle goes to jail for ten years, the son for six years.

The girl will get her large fortune and marry her "penniless lover." Things do end happily, sometimes.

DISCOURAGING to industrious burglars is a new vault, typical of the times, built by the Chase National Bank.

Three stories deep, the vault contains an elevator, stands on a piece of land worth $5,000,000 and is entirely surrounded with reinforced concrete 12 feet thick. The bottom of this vault is 85 feet below the ground, on solid rock.

To tell how much money is in it would make the burglars TOO sad.

WOMEN, old and young, are so brave it amazes you. Any woman will run into a fire and burn to save her child. Any woman will stand between a bullet and somebody that she likes.

Here comes Miss Nancy Glave, intelligent, young, good-looking, offering to jump from an airplane every day by parachute to help a charitable undertaking.

She never jumped from an aeroplane in her life. That makes no difference.

THE Ile de France, eastbound, launched an airplane 100 miles this side of the Scilly Islands, sending important mail to Paris 15 hours ahead of the Ile de France landing.

The French have thus established a combination ship and airplane delivery for mail, saving 30 hours on the round trip.

This will be remembered if we ever have a war. One plane from Europe or Asia could drop on any city enough poison gas to kill 200,000 human beings.

IN SEVEN days New York's telephone company collected $3,858 for answering "what time is it?" Those that asked the time and paid for an answer numbered 77,160.

At that rate "smiling voice" young ladies, looking at the clock, without effort would collect for the telephone company $200,616 every year. Nickels count in big things.

Get a reliable timepiece.

WINDSOR, Ont., witnesses swear that Canada's rum king, who does his ruling from Detroit, on the American side, spends $10,000 a month "for sales promotion."

Sales promotion is sometimes described as "watering the flowers." It means handing money to those that COULD interfere with you if they wanted to, but don't when the flowers are properly watered.

MORE business failures in Italy, 6,016 of them in six months.

Business men blame their troubles on the high price of the lira, stabilized by Mussolini. He wanted to make Italian money more valuable, to help the Italian people.

Business people say, "We need cheap money that we may hire labor for less REAL money and thus compete with other nations."

France, stabilizing the franc at 1 cent below the lira, has helped French business.

WIDOW STRICKEN

Almost prostrated with grief, Mrs. Marguerite Dapper saw the body of her husband, the young Carrick physicianfl lowered into its grave today as detectives still vainly sought his murderer. This picture of the grief-stricken wife was snapped through the door window of the car as she left to enter the church.

CROWD AT CHURCH

Hundreds lined up outside of St. Basil's Catholic Church, Carrick, and saw the pallbearers carry the casket to its resting place.

It was in this crowd that detectives scanned faces for the murderer, hoping he had been attracted to the funeral of his victim out of morbid curiosity.

SMITH VOTE HERE GROWS

Gov. Alfred E. Smith's acceptance speech Wednesday night was followed yesterday by a marked increase in the proportion of Smith ballots in the straw vote canvass conducted throughout Pennsylvania by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Hoover votes came in a spurt following the Republican candidate's acceptance address and the Smith supporters came true to form.

Hoover votes slightly outnumbered those for Smith in the day's return, but in the city poll Smith again showed increased strength. The larger number of Republican straw votes were cast by the men of the suburban districts of the cities. The women voters in these districts showed a preference for Smith.

In the rural sections the women outnumber the male vote for Hoover in the latest returns. The ballots returned by the men were practically the same as between Hoover and Smith. In 1924 these districts were overwhelmingly Republican, according to the returns made by those sending their ballots.

Return postal card ballots have been sent a list of 10 per cent of the registered voters of the first 24 wards of the city of Philadelphia, and the returns from these are eagerly anticipated. At the same time about an equal number of ballots have been sent to the voters in the rural counties of the state.

The result of the polls thus far in Pennsylvania shows that leaders of both parties are justified in their declarations that the fight will be close. Subsequent ballots may show a change, but to date the aggregate returns indicate a neck-and-neck race between Hoover and Smith. It indicates also that the party preferences in the various districts in 1924 are no certain guide to the results this year.

2ND SOS SIGNED HASSELL HEARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Eric Palmer, Jr., of Brooklyn, an amateur radio operator, reported this afternoon that he had just been in communication with a station representing itself as that of the missing plane Greater Rockford. The message he received confirmed the communication intercepted last night at Chicago.

The message as copied by Palmer read: "Hello, old man, we are on an island about 50 miles north of Newfoundland. Our food supply is getting low. Using wind generator for power for transmission. Talked last night with 9CDJ, Chicago. Please send help. Rockford, KHAH."

CALLS REPEATED

Palmer began his communication with the station at 11:15 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, when he answered its repeated calls of "CO, CO, Co," (the code for calling stations when a message is to be transmitted.) Palmer said the station was working on 42.8 meters.

CHICAGO GETS MESSAGES

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Out of the air early today there came a wireless SOS signed "The Rockland Fliers."

It said the Rockford-to-Sweden plane, missing since early Sunday morning, was down on a small island off Newfoundland and that the fliers, Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, were safe.

Joy born of what apparently was first definite information of the plane's fate quickly faded, however, when wireless experts began casting serious doubts as to the message's authenticity.

MESSAGE BROADCAST

It seemed certain that a message purporting to come from the plane was actually broadcast, for two amateurs, one in Chicago, the other in Toledo, O., made independent reports on hearing it. On the other hand, it appeared very im-

WILL QUIZ FATHER OF SLAIN DOCTOR

In an effort to clear up apparent discrepancies, Henry A. Dapper, father of Dr. Harry R. Dapper, slain Carrick physician, and members of the latter's family will be called to county detective headquarters tomorrow to give sworn statements as to all circumstances of the mysterious murder.

Detectives notified the elder Dapper following funeral services for the son today, held at the father's home, 18 Clifton boulevard, Carrick, and later at St. Basil's Catholic Church. Sleuths mingled with the crowd in a vain hope that the slayer might be attracted to the scene.

Detectives James T. Reddington and Patrick Trainor, first assigned to the murder of Dr. Dapper—who was lured from his home Monday night under pretense of visiting a sick woman, then shot and killed at a lonely spot in Mifflin township—want a complete, definite account of what took place preceding and following the slaying, principally from the father of the slain man. The elder Dapper was with his son on the death ride.

STATEMENTS CONFLICT

The grief-stricken father made several conflicting statements to detectives and newspapermen, the detectives assert, which it is desired to clear up by questioning.

The first account given by the elder Dapper, the sleuths say, was that his son drove to the elder Dapper's home and asked his father to accompany him on the trip Monday night and that the two then returned to the office for the stranger. Later the father is said to have informed detectives that Dr. Dapper with the stranger in his car drove to the former's home.

Another point to be checked is the breaking of the glass window in the young physician's car following the shooting.

The elder Dapper told detectives, they say, he was thrown against the car window while he and the stranger were struggling outside

Greet Pittsburgh

MR. AND MRS. HOOVER

Herbert Hoover, stopping off in Pittsburgh en route East today, conferred with Republican leaders on the presidential campaign in Allegheny county.

1,000 Greet Hoover

Answering an eleventh-hour summons, Pittsburgh and Allegheny county Republican leaders today mobilized in goodly numbers to greet Herbert Hoover, G. O. P. standard bearer, in his first appearance here since his nomination.

Indifference toward the Republican presidential candidate, shown unmistakably yesterday when it was announced that the Hoover special train would pass through Pittsburgh, was changed suddenly towards noon when James Francis Burke, close friend of Hoover, telephoned city and county officials and other leaders and summarily demanded they turn out.

The Hoover special train with Mr. and Mrs. Hoover and their large party of advisors and campaigners, motion picture cameramen, publicity agents and newspapermen arrived at the Pennsylvania Station from Chicago at 12:20 p. m. and departed 15 minutes later for Washington.

A crowd, numbering, perhaps, 1,000 persons, apparently was a pleasant sight for Mr. Hoover's tired eyes. He accepted their greeting warmly, but with his natural diffidence, there was no patting on the back, no button-holing, baby-kissing or other forms of traditional gesticulation.

SPEAKS BRIEFLY

So matter of fact is Hoover, the candidate, that the photographers were obliged to ask him to pose with his arm outstretched in order to put "life" in their pictures.

"Pittsburgh, noted above American cities for its great Republican majorities, will be required now in this contest in which we must bring out the full strength of the party," said Mr. Hoover.

This constituted his entire speech after he had expressed to the crowd his appreciation of their greeting. He spoke slowly and measured his words as if he desired Republican leaders of the importance of the task before them if they hoped to give him the same support that Pittsburgh in former elections had

STOCKS UP $2 TO $14 IN BUYING DELUGE

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Wild speculation for the advance, such as characterized the big 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 share markets last spring, broke out on the New York Stock Exchange today. Buying orders were poured into the market in such gigantic volume from all sections of the country that prices were whirled upward $2 to $14 a share. Nearly two score issues including American Smelting, National Cash Register, Chrysler, Montgomery-Ward, Allied Chemical and Armour "A" touched new high prices for the year, or longer.

Customers' rooms of leading brokerage houses, which presented a deserted appearance a few weeks ago, were crowded with excited traders. The ticker tape fell behind at the start and the abbreviated quotation system was quickly put into effect in order to keep pace with the market. Blocks of 5,000 to 10,000 shares were quite common.

Profit-taking sales, which ordinarily are heavy in the closing days of the week, were well absorbed and early afternoon prices in many cases were above the high marks of the morning.

Hostilities between the Pirates and Giants will break out again this afternoon, but the fighting will be limited to one game.

The four-hour warfare of yesterday ended with honors even, yet the Giants, by losing one of the contests, were deprived of first place, the 50-50 break gained by the Buccos putting the Cardinals back on top.

The Pirates were five games from the top before the dual clash started, but they were five and one-half games away at the close of the day. They were this distance from St. Louis before the Giants reached town.

Burleigh Grimes is due to face his former buddies this afternoon, in the third clash of the series. Joe Genewich is supposed to be McGraw's selection.

DENIED SEWER, WATER, 200 SECEDE

Local Republican Leaders -:- Greet Hoover and Wife -:- On Short Stop Here

PHOTOS BY PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH.

NEAR THE DEADLINE

At the last hour Pittsburgh Republican leaders turned out to greet Herbert Hoover when his special train stopped here for 15 minutes today. On the platform of the train the Republican nominee for President posed with (left to right) Mrs. A. G. H. Frazier, Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. J. Scott Burke, Candidate Hoover and Joseph G. Armstrong, county commissioner.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE

CROWD STORMS TRAIN

The crowd that stormed the G. O. P. candidate's train numbered perhaps 1,000, most of them eagerly seeking a handshake with the nominee or an autograph. (Arrow points to Hoover reaching out over the platform of his special to shake hands with an admirer who no doubt will cast a Republican vote come next November.

DENIED SEWER, WATER, 200 SECEDE FROM TP.

Two hundred citizens of Shaler township, living in the thickly settled strip along the Butler pike, met in the Undercliff schoolhouse last night and decided to secede from the township and form a borough. This action was prompted by the township commissioners' disapproval of a request that a water and sewer system be installed.

As things are now, every family must have its own well and own arrangements for the disposal of sewage. The people living along the pike want city conveniences. The farmers in the hinterland object to the township paying for them because of the increase in taxes. The farmers are said to have won the township commissioners to their side. Hence the rebellion on the part of the "White Collar Folks" in Undercliffe, Glenshaw, Villsack and Elfinwild.

At the meeting last night a committee was appointed to arrange for the formation of a borough. Another meeting will be held September 13.

The secessionists say bad water in Shaler township caused a typhoid epidemic two years ago and may cause another. A city water and sewer system will make the township develop like the South Hills, they think, and by increasing the value of real estate more than make up for the increase in taxes that the proposed improvements will entail.

GRILL FATHER OF DR. DAPPER

the car. The sleuths found pieces of glass near a wall, which, fitted together, nearly completed the panel, indicating, they are inclined to believe, that the glass was broken from within and pushed outward.

Differences in the description of the slayer, the physician's car in which the slayer escaped and other details, should be cleared by statements from the father and other members of the physician's family, detectives believe.

Religion and the law mingled strangely as relatives and friends, and a host of the curious, followed Dr. Dapper to his grave.

In a faint hope that morbid interest might draw the slayer to the bier of his victim, detectives attended the services. They looked on as solemn high requiem mass was celebrated. In St. Basil's Church, and then escorted the body to its resting place in St. Michael's Cemetery.

WIDOW FAINTS

No clue rewarded the vigil. If the slayer sat among the mourners at St. Basil's, or stood near the graveside, he gave no sign. All that disturbed the solemn calm of the church liturgy was a sob and a call for water as the slain man's wife, Marguerite Dapper, fainted while the mass was being sung. Solicitous ushers brought water, and she was revived.

Their purpose strangely at odds with the portent of the chanted Latin and the swaying censer, detectives warily scanned faces among the thousands or more persons who filled the pews at St. Basil's, lined the walls, and jostled for place at the doors.

They stood at the cemetery gates as the cortege filed through, by auto and afoot. They mingled with the crowd at the grave, still watching for the face of a killer in that place of death, but no sign repaid them.

With 84 hours elapsed from the time of the slaying in an isolated spot in Mifflin township, Monday night, where the physician had been lured on the pretext of visiting a dying woman, until the hour of his funeral, the detectives seemingly were no nearer a solution than at first.

The bootleg revenge theory has bobbed up, but thus far the detectives have found nothing to substantiate it. A report that Dr. Dapper had been a witness before the Federal grand jury's liquor conspiracy probe which resulted in indictment of 167 politicians, police and alleged bootleggers was found erroneous.

The physician's father says there was no particular reason for his taking the empty pistol along, but he did it more as a whim than anything else. The gun, he says, had been around the house for many months and had been used by children as a plaything.

"I saw the weapon on the table," the elder Dapper related, "and just picked it up without any particular reason."

AUTO CLUE FIZZLES

County detectives are checking every available tip, all of which so far have proved worthless. The bootlegging angle yesterday afternoon was supplied from an outside source kept secret by the detectives, but was investigated thoroughly.

Assistant Chief Harry B. Cochran of the County Detective Bureau remained silent when questioned about the bootleg angle. However, he let it be known that Detective Frank Ritz had uncovered the clue which led him to Clairton. The report that the missing automobile had been found near Imperial yesterday turned out to be another "fooler" for the sleuths.

shown Republican presidential candidates.

He was introduced by Mr. Burke as "the next President of the United States," and the crowd shouted its affirmation. Then Mrs. Hoover stepped upon the platform of the private car and was presented with a huge bouquet of red roses by Mrs. J. Scott Burke.

Mrs. Hoover, whose gray hair gives her an elderly appearance, has much the same quiet manner of her husband and when addressed by newspapermen, declared that "she never gave interviews on political questions." She added that in matter relating to philanthropy, civics and social work she would be glad to talk at the proper time.

MRS. FRAZIER THERE

Mrs. A. G. H. Frazier, county chairman, who said she did not learn of Hoover's coming until late in the forenoon, hurried to the station and was the first caller to step on the car, where she remained and talked with Mrs. Hoover while photographs were being taken.

County Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock were introduced after representatives of the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association were taken inside the car and presented to the candidate. These were W. McK. Reed, Harrison Nesbit, Lawrence C. Sands, H. C. McEldowney and others.

Babcock and Armstrong, who headed the political delegation, were not accompanied by Commissioner C. C. McGovern. Mayor Charles H. Kline is out of the city, but Directors James M. Clark and Edward G. Lang and Councilmen Daniel Winters, W. Y. English, John S. Herron and Robert Garland got around in time to extend the city's greetings.

Then followed a string of various officeholders, minor candidates and payrollers, who finally were edged aside by traffic policemen, who made way for women with small children, flappers who wanted to kiss Mrs. Hoover and Negro porters who wanted to shake hands with the candidate.

Mr. Hoover plainly is averse to the usual campaign ballyhoo. He shook hands with little Negro boys, smiled gallantly when young women spoke to him, and he had a warm greeting for fond mothers—but positively he did not kiss any babies.

Dance Czars Pick NewStep—andPgh.

DETROIT, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The "Ecstacy Glide" in slow fox trot rhythm is the approved dance of the 1928-29 season so far as the dancing master of America are concerned.

The masters placed their approval on the new dance after witnessing no less than a dozen offerings of varying steps, slices, cuts and stomps.

The "Ecstacy Glide" is the creation of Thomas Sheehy, of Chicago, who demonstrated it with Miss Lucille Stoddart, of Milwaukee. It presents a combination of slides, two steps and schottische steps. The dancing masters gave it 112 votes as against 77 for a "Campus Drag" offered by Mrs. Walter Keenan, of Philadelphia.

Raymond Bott, of Youngstown, O., was re-elected president of the Dancing Masters' Association last night and Pittsburgh was selected for next year's convention.

probable to experienced radio men that the message was sent from the plane's small set, "KHAH."

"Get word to the Associated Press and our families," said the first mesage received by R. J. Harris, Chicago amateur, "that we are down on a small island 50 miles off Newfoundland, and are safe."

Harris, whose station is 9CEJ, asked the sender who had signed as "The Rockforgd Fliers," to stand by for ten minutes while he communicated the message to the Associated Press. Harris then returned to his set and later reported receiving the following message:

"Our oil feed failed us and we landed on a small island. We are o. k. and safe, but food low. Using a generator for power for communication. Our position is on a small island about 50 miles off Newfoundland."

After receiving this, Harris said he asked the sender to give him a "schedule" for later in the evening; that is, he asked the sender to set a later hour during which communication might be resumed. In answer to this request this message was received:

"We are very tired and need sleep badly, so can't have a schedule tonight. Will call you tomorrow night, 9 p. m., Central Standard time, or 11 p. m., Eastern Standard time. Please get word to our families. Best regards to all. (Signed) the Rockford Fliers."

Harris said that when he first heard the signals they were "swinging" badly, a condition he compared with "fading," which is familiar to radio set operators listening to distant stations. Very soon, however, the signals became clear and reception thereafter was simple, Harris said.

It was at 12:15 a. m., Chicago daylight saving time, that Harris reported hearing the signals from "KHAH." Joseph E. Williams, a Toledo, O., radio amateur, who said he also was in communication with the Greater Rockford, gave the time as 11:30 p. m. to 11:45 p. m., Eastern Standard time, or approximately half an hour earlier than the Chicago operator. The plane, if it was the plane, said it had been trying all evening to get in touch with someone. Williams said when he first heard it, it was calling 9CES, a call which might have been mistaken for 9CEJ.

WAVE LENGTH DIFFERENT

Among the several amateurs and others who doubted that the messages originated from the Greater Rockford's set was W. H. Hoffman, chief radio operator of the Burgess Battery Company, of Madison, Wis., which installed the set in the plane. Hoffman said it would have been impossible for the Greater Rockford's set to have transmitted on a wave length of 42.8, as both Harris and Williams reported. The plane's equipment, Hoffman said, was so constructed that it could not send on a wave length more than six points removed from 32.4, the wave assigned it.

$5,000 Fine for Faking SOS Flash

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Should the new signals purporting to come from the Hassell plane, Greater Rockford, prove to be a hoax the perpetrator may face a heavy penalty if he should be detected.

The law provides a $5,000 fine and imprisonment for not more than five years or both for each sending out of false distress signals. The problem is to trace such calls, which, unless repeated, proves difficult.

The radio division of the Department of Commerce and the Federal Radio Commission were still without information from their field men today as to the calls last night. Officials said one amateur received the signal "KHAK" in a message purporting to come from the Rockford, whereas the Hassell call is KHAH.

It is not unusual for prank-loving amateurs to use false call letters, it was said, but this is seldom done with mischevous intent.

MRS. SNOWDEN, PRESBYTERIAN LEADER, DIES

Mrs. Mary Ross Snowden, prominent in Presbyterian church circles for almost 50 years, and the wife of the Rev. Dr. James H. Snowden, died today at her home, 941 Miami avenue, Mt. Lebanon. She was 76.

Mrs. Snowden was born near Wellsville, O., June 15, 1852, and was married to Dr. Snowden August 1, 1878. On August 1 the couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Snowden was leader of the Mothers' Club and the Prayer Circle of the First Presbyterian Church, of which she was a member. For many years she was president of the Missionary Society of Washington, Pa.

Besides her husband, she leaves three children: Miss Grace Snowden and Dr. R. R. Snowden, of Pittsburgh, and N. W. Snowden, of New York.

SMITH OPENS GATES FOR DRY DEMOCRATS

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Gov. Al Smith has pinned his hope of being elected president on his demand for liberalization of the prohibition amendment and modification of the Volstead law, but he made it plain today that he has no inteiton of asking Democratic candidates for the United States Senate or any other public office to take the same stand.

So far as Smith is concerned they are at liberty to wage their own campaign by promising vigorous opposition to any change in the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead Act.

Because he promised in his acceptance speech to enforce prohibition so long as it is a part of the law, the Governor does not feel that it would be inconsistent for any dry Democratic candidate, or, for that matter, any advocate of prohibition, to support him at the polls in November.

Smith takes the position that he, as well as every other Democratic candidate, has the right to express his personal views on prohibition or any other issue, regardless of the platform. He made it plain, however, that he does not feel that he, nor any other Democratic candidate, can change the party's platform by his personal views.

In declaring his belief that every dry could support him without suffering a guilty conscience, Gov. Smith said:

"Every man that is nominated is nominated on the platform of the supreme body of his party, to wit: the national convention. Nobody can amend the platform."

Not only does Smith feel that he has the right to expect the support of dry Democrats but he does not see how any "sensible" person could take exception to what he said about prohibition in his acceptance speech.

The Governor was elated over thousands of congratulatory messages which poured into the Capitol and the executive mansion, following his speech of acceptance. Those which he had time to read before he came to New York praised him for his stand on the prohibition question, he said.

"They were the right kind; they all said something nice about the acceptance speech," the Governor said.

"Did you get any of the other kind?" he was asked.

"Well," he answered smiling, "if any of that kind came I didn't see them."

Connellsville Undaunted by Reverses

"Toujours de l'audace." Always to dare. Danton's motto might well be inscribed on Connellsville's coat of arms. Undismayed by disasters that would have quenched the ambition of many a community, the Fayette county city, with characteristic courage, has initiated new enterprises which have brought new prosperity. Still greater things are in store, for the city is to gain a new trunk line with the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad extension, which will tap undeveloped coal fields of the Freeport vein.

Connellsville's 14,000 bee-hive coke ovens have been virtually put out of business by the by-product coking plants at Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Cleveland. The destruction by fire of the Baltimore and Ohio machine shops last February was another blow. But the city has acquired other industries. The young men who manage one of them, a factory whose products are probably to be found on your pantry shelves, have just scrapped $100,000 worth of equipment, installed less than a year ago, because they have found something better. That is the Connellsville spirit! And it is bringing its reward.

There will be a page of news and pictures of Connellsville in The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph on Sunday.

Charles L. Seamons, owner of the new airport, congratulates Maj. H. C. Davidson, commandant of Bolling Field, Washington, who escaped injury when, in landing the first plane on the new field, the ship overturned. Davison crawled from the upturned plane "good as new."

THE FAIRER SEX

Three excellent examples of Uniontown's fair sex watch planes performing overhead and then move on to a seat of vantage for the colorful parade of the Legioinnaires. If all goes as expected, the vets are expected to elect W. H. McNaugher the new state president.

FROM BRADFORD

This parade scene features the Bradford Post band, which contributed its share to the festivities. All Uniontown lined the streets to cheer the ex-doughboys. "The town is yours," Mayor Crawford told vets. And they took it! The sessions will close today.

SUN-TELEGRAPH HOST TO VETS TOMORROW

Tomorrow is the day!

War veterans of Pittsburgh will get together for a day of fun and frolic at Kennywood Park Saturday, in a great, free reunion picnic sponsored by The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Arrangements have been completed to provide for an attendance that is expected to break all records of previous years.

Members of the Salvation Army will be on hand ready to serve coffee and doughnuts to all the boys. And every veteran will receive a strip of tickets good for Kennywood Park amusements.

Every veteran and his family is urged to attend. Some means of identification, such as organization medals or buttons, uniforms or discharge papers, is all that is required to gain admittance.

Committees appointed by various veteran organizations have been active in stimulating interest in the reunion picnic among their members.

Disabled veterans will be transported to and from the reunion leaving the Marine Hospital at 2:30 p. m. Saturday. Civil War Veterans who desire transportation will be taken care of if they congregate at the Marine Hospital at this time.

The Sun-Telegraph will be host to disabled and Civil War Veterans at a dinner a 6 p. m., at Kennywood Park. A real beefsteak feast has been prepared through the cooperation of Mr. Wenzel, proprietor of the Kennywood Park dining room.

The Sun-Telegraph urges every veteran to attend this great reunion tomorrow. It will be a day without an idle moment and prove a great chance to meet old friends and buddies.

2 MORE BODIES IN RIVER SET NEW AUGUST RECORD

Pittsburgh rivers gave up two bodies today, a record total of 14 during the month.

The body of Arthur Brooks, 12, a Negro, of 1816 Clifton street, turned up by the Monongahela River at South Thirteenth street this morning, and the body of an unidentified Negro, apparently in the waters of the same river for more than a month, was discovered on the bank under the Dravosburg Bridge.

From August 1 until today, the Ohio gave up three, the Monongahela five and the Allegheny six bodies. Five were infants and the remainder adults. August 10 three were discovered.

The day by day record of bodies found: August 1, George F. Bozett, 845 Phineas street, North Side, at High street, in the Allegheny River; August 2, unidentified infant, Monongahela River at Becks Run; August 3, unidentified infant at Bellbridge, Monongahela River; unidentified infant, Ferry street, Leetsdale, Ohio River; August 6, Samuel Nicholson, Baltimore, Md., Ohio River, near Stoops Ferry; Frank Haas, 315 Thirty-ninth street, foot of Pindar street, Allegheny River; August 10, unidentified infant, Point Bridge, Allegheny River; William J. Clifford, 837 Anaheim street, Allegheny River, at Sandy Creek; Ethel Lewis, 23, of 217 Spring way, Allegheny River, foot of Twenty-eighth street; August 20, Nicolas Fitzgerald, 40 South Main street, Ohio River, at Ella street, McKees Rocks; August 22, Stephen Evans, 410 Fourth avenue, Homestead, Monongahela River, at McClure avenue; infant girl, Monongahela River, under South Twenty-second street bridge.

Eye Blackened

ROSA PONSELLE

Struck in the eye by a golf ball at Saranac Lake yesterday, Rosa Ponselle, Metropolitan Opera soprano, insisted on going ahead with plans to sing at a charity program today. Miss Ponselle's eye was blackened and swollened.

Drives Automobile Through Car Tunnel

Pittsburgh Railways police didn't mind so much when E. P. Johnson, 28, of 1400 Marlboro avenue, Wilkinsburg, drove his automobile through the Mt. Washington street car tunnel, but when he continued on into one of the car barns at the south end of the tunnel they arrested him.

Special Patrolman E. L. Brickley, of the railways company, told police at the Mt. Washington station that Johnson had held up traffic in the tunnel and made a charge of reckless driving. Johnson said he thought he was on the road to Homestead.

REPORTS ASKED ON 'PETTERS'

C. H. Roth, secretary of the Pittsburgh Motor Club, today called on motorists to note the license numbers of cars driven recklessly by "petters" and report them to the police.

The man or girl who drives with one arm around a companion is violating the law, he declared, and should be arrested and punished as a menace to users of the highways.

Roth decried love-making in a motor car.

"There are front porches, parlors and untraveled lanes for such purposes," he remarked, "all more private than an open road.

"This is an age of speed, but it is inconceivable that the average girl would rather receive a one-armed proposal while traveling at a speed of 30 to 50 miles an hour than hear the story in a quieter and more romantic setting."

FRY OFF TO PUSH PGH. FOR AIR MAIL ROUTE

Col. Harry C. Fry, Jr., of Pittsburgh, will arrive today in Baltimore where he will confer with Washington and Baltimore officials preparatory to a hearing with postal officials in Washington tomorrow on the proposed new air mail route connecting three cities which will make Pittsburgh a main point on the through trans-continental air lane.

Col. Fry has with him more than 2,000 communications from Pittsburghers who urge the establishment of the new air route. He also has many letters from officials of banks and manufacturing companies here who ask that the air route be started at the earliest possible moment. Postmaster General Harry S. New, with whom representatives of the three cities will meet tomorrow, looks favorably upon the proposed route, Fry said.

CRASHES GATE, ARRESTED

After his automobile had crashed through the gates of the Pennsylvania Railroad crossing in Amity street, Homestead, today, George E. Stitt, 28, of Brownsville, Pa., was held on a charge of violating a borough ordinance. The gates were down and a train was approaching as Stitt drove onto the crossing, police alleged.

ERIE VETERAN MADE HEAD OF 40-8

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 24.—Pennsylvania department of La Societe 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux, in annual session in connection with the Legion convention, last night elected William Yeager of Erie as its grand chef de gare.

Other officers chosen were: George A. Smith, Somerset, chef de train; Thomas Munroe, Cherry Tree, commissaire intendent; William H. Burns, Easton, conducteur; Harry W. Schriver, Pittsburgh, cheminot national; Dr. Reed, Harrisburg, cheminot nationale alternate.

Delegates to the national promenade at San Antonio are Yeager and Monroe, and Daniel Hartbauer, Pittsburgh; William H. Miller, West Chester; the Rev. Wolorshuk of Johnstown. Alternate delegates are Harry Shinton, Altoona; Edward Morris, Schuylkill county; John McCormick, Greensburg; John Lampke, Jeannette, Dr. Kingsbury, Harrisburg.

Beaver County Voiture, No. 739, was awarded a silver cup for outstanding committee achievement. The installation of a voiture at Midland, Pa., and the erection of a memorial monument at New Brighton.

Dr. Gilden, Philadelphia, was given unanimous support for his candidacy for national chef de gare.

State Legion Commander Edwin E. Hollenbeck, Philadelphia voiture, addressed the delegates.

The delegates voted to redistrict the state into six districts. District commanders elected are: J. W. Fawcett, Oil City, northwestern; Henry Moultrop, DuBois, north central; Leroy F. Kauffman, Kane, northeastern; H. R. Freeston, Philadelphia, southeastern; J. C. Deal, York, southeastern, and Elit Felix, Johnstown, southwestern.

HOME BREW FOUND IN RAID; $25 FINE

Lieut. William Fullerton and a squad of police raided the home of Nick Reda, 47, of 1009 Gerritt street, last night, on complaint of neighbors that it was a disorderly house. Homebrew was found fermenting in a bathtub in the cellar. Fullerton opened the stopper and let the beer escape, he reported. Magistrate William J. Soost imposed a fine of $25 on Reda in the Frankstown Avenue Police Station today.

FIGHT FOR PRESIDENCY OF LEGION AUXILIARY

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 24.—The sessions of the auxiliary to the American Legion, meeting in state convention with the legion here, were thrown into turmoil today when friends of Mrs. Josiah Reed, of Harrisburg, bolted a prearranged program and started a campaign for her election as state president.

Mrs. Frank C. Emery, of Williamsport, had no opposition for the place as auxiliary head until this morning, and it had been agreed the post should go to her. Results of the contest will be known tomorrow.

Organization of committees and their programs occupied the morning session of the legion delegates. Officers, except state commander, were to be elected, and the constitution, resolutions, dues and legislative committees were to meet this afternoon. The 1929 convention city was to be picked, with Scranton a likely choice.

Lucius McK. Crumrine, of Washington, Pa., was elected national committeeman of the Pennsylvania Department.

Charles F. Gorman, of Philadelphia, was elected department chaplain.

Two casualties have marred the convention. E. M. Roberts, of 334 Lafayette avenue, Pittsburgh, drum major of Post No. 66, tripped and fractured his left ankle while leading the drum corps in a parade this morning. Clare Allen, of Illingwood, W. Va., was burned on the face and hands in a fireworks explosion.

WATCHING BATHER SWIM, BOY DROWNS

Slipping from a barge in the Youghiogheny River at the foot of Ninth street, McKeesport, while watching his brother and a companion swim, Albert Razath, 12, of 81 Mulberry street, McKeesport, fell into the stream and was drowned. The swimmers made an unsuccessful attempt to save him. The body was recovered.

WHEAT SEEN AS FOLLOWING 1924 TREND

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Acting Secretary of Agriculture Dunlap declared today that "it is reasonable to believe" that the trend of wheat prices may follow the same course as during the 1923-24 season when the world harvested the largest crop of wheat of record, and prices reached their low point in August and ended the year considerably above the August level.

"No advantage to the grower results when prices are readjusted upward if the wheat has left the farm," he said, explaining that "it is well known that heavy marketings at the beginning of a season tend to depress prices too much."

Mr. Dunlap advised farmers to hold back their crops, saying that "farmers who sell their crops immediately after harvest without regard to the state of the market, may have cause to regret it later."

GROVE CITY FAMILY OF 5 STUNNED BY LIGHTNING

GROVE CITY, Pa., Aug. 24.—When a bolt of lightning struck their home, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Cornelius and three children were severely shocked. The home was badly damaged.

LONE CHINESE FOLLOWS SON'S BODY TO GRAVE

Save for his father, there were no mourners to follow the body of Billy Kim Yung, 8 months, Chinese, to his grave in United Cemetery, West View, today. Encased in a cheap white coffin, the body was placed in a white hearse, while behind followed a sedan, containing the father, Billy Kim Yung, Sr. The mother was too ill to attend the funeral.

The family came here 10 days ago from San Francisco and took rooms at 620 Lockhart street, North Side. The father went to work in an East Ohio street restaurant.

Yesterday the baby died of convulsions after a day's illness. The father carried the body next door to the undertaking establishment of Walter Sterling, 622 Lockhart street. Later he returned with a tot's white sailor suit and asked that it be placed on the boy.

Shortly after noon today he again appeared, looked at the little one, and then the casket was closed and it was whisked away to the cemetery.

Man and Wife Quarrel -:- Shots Follow -:- Murder and Suicide

CHARLES KOPP

Kopp, a mill policeman, killed his wife and himself in their home, 537 Stokes avenue, North Braddock, as the climax of a domestic quarrel.

ALONE NOW

These children of Kopp's first wife are unable to comprehend the tragedy which struck their home. They are (left to right)—Margaret, 8; Carl, 10, and Trevitt, 6. Neighbors are caring for the children.

MRS. TINN

But a few minutes before the double shooting, Mrs. Kopp told Mrs. Tinn she was making preparations to leave her husband.

ONCE A HAPPY HOME

This neat little house owned by the Kopps, was just one of the many homes of ordinary, everyday citizens, until the tragedy made it the center of interest of the neighborhood.

MRS. MARY T. KOPP

Neighbors noted disparity in ages of the Kopps and suggest that as an underlying cause of their domestic differences. Mrs. Kopp was 32 and her husband 55.

MURDERED HERE

Motorcycle Patrolman William Glenn is pointing to the spot where Mrs. Kopp's body was found. Her husband was found unconscious in an adjoining room. He died in the Braddock General Hospital soon after being admitted. The woman was shot in the head.

HOOVER HOLDS LEAD IN NATION-WIDE POLL TOTALS

SMITH SHOWING WEAKNESS IN NORTHWEST

By CHARLES N. WHEELER, Noted Political Analyst.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24—Three high spots stand out in today's complete tabulation of the nation-wide straw vote gathered by the Hearst publications.

They are:

1. Mr. Hoover has the comfortable lead in the nation-wide figures of 149,561 to 143,736 for Gov. Smith.

2. First returns show Minnesota is swinging to the Hoover camp, an indication, as the figures are analyzed, that the big LaFollette vote of four years ago is not going to Smith in any appreciable numbers.

3. A poll of five per cent of the voters in every one of Milwaukee's 318 precincts indicates that the New York Governor will carry that city by better than 2 to 1 over Mr. Hoover.

MINNESOTA HOOVER'S

The Minnesota figures give the Republicans all the best of the argument, both with respect to the women and men vote. Mr. Hoover has a total of 1,152 to 790 for Smith. The returns represent scattered votes in eight counties.

The Minnesota tabulations as of Wednesday emphasize what seems to be the case with all of the agrarian states, namely, that the women are flocking to the Hoover bandwagon in unprecedented numbers.

Hoover, for example, gets 539 women votes to 308 for Smith, and leads likewise in the men vote with a total of 613 to 482.

While no definite figures are available as yet, reliable reports from the adjacent Dakotas would seem to warrant the classification of both states thus early in the battle in the Hoover column.

MILWAUKEE FOR SMITH

Milwaukee is a spot where women are voting for Smith in larger numbers than for Hoover.

New and interesting figures from Pennsylvania, with the country folks getting into the picture, show the Keystone commonwealth following its Republican tradition and swinging in behind Mr. Hoover.

The early returns from this section were confined for the most part to Pittsburgh. With the rural districts reporting, however, the Smith lead has been almost wiped out.

New Jersey appears to be veering to the New York Governor's camp, and if the electoral vote were to be decided in the popular vote of the cities along the coast there probably would be little doubt of the result.

While the present indications are Democratic, the folks in the conning towers back from the coast send word that the rural districts appear to be strongly Hoover.

The Rhode Island totals should brighten up the Democratic chiefs.

HOOVER HOLDING N. Y.

Hoover is still in the lead in the grand totals in New York State, although the upstate vote is not piling up sufficiently to reassure the Republican managers.

RHODE ISLAND FOR AL

California is swinging to Hoover by a big lead, while in Connecticut it is a neck-and-neck struggle.

A surprising feature of the late figures is the lead Hoover has in Florida. The totals are Hoover 1,236, Smith 909.

Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, won the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Miami district. She is making a great campaign for herself, but Gov. Smith's firm stand for the knocking out of the Eighteenth Amendment is counted on to further enrage the disgruntled Floridians, who flocked to the Owen standard in a measure because of the uncompromising fight her father waged against Demon Rum.

On the other hand, Smith appears to be running well in Georgia, with Hoover trailing some distance behind.

Hoover, meantime, is leading in all three border states—Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri—and out in front in Tennessee.

STATE EMPLOYE HELD AS DRUNKEN DRIVER

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 24.—As the outcome of an automobile collision last Tuesday night, Warren Q. Taylor, an employe of the State Department of Labor and Industry, has been held for court. He is charged with driving while drunk.

W. VA. DEMOCRATS NAME M'CORKLE FINANCE HEAD

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 24.—Former Gov. William A. MacCorkle, Charleston, has been named chairman of the campaign finance committee of the Democratic party by Andrew Edmiston, Jr., of the State Executive Committee, here. Other members of the finance committee named are: Arthur B. Koontz, Charleston; Olandus West, Clarksburg; J. Lewis Baumgardner, Beckley; R. H. Hanlon, Wheeling; Willis W. Beall, Wellsburg; Edward Stevenson, Parkersburg; George I. Neal, Huntington; O. M. Dyerle, Bluefield; E. W. Watson, Fairmont; Clarence E. Martin, Martinsburg; Carey Alderson, Logan; Dave C. Ray, Morgantown; B. J. Maynard, Williamson; John T. Davis, Elkins, and Dr. L. H. Clark, Kyle.

DANIEL MAYER DIES; MANAGED MUSIC STARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Daniel Mayer, concert manager and impressario of New York and London, died in the latter city yesterday at 72. Mr. Mayer, who was managing the European tour of Duscolina Giannini, American soprano, introduced Paderewski to English audiences in 1890 and two years later brought the pianist to this country. He was the first manager of Pavlowa, Elman, Levitzki and Hoffman, and at various times managed Kreisler, De Pachmann, Arthur Nikisch, Caruso, Carreno, Sarasate, D'Albert, Busoni and other stars. Mr. Mayer, born in Westphalia in 1856, was taken to England at the age of 2.

LAYTON BRICK WORKER HURT IN KILN COLLAPSE

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 24.—When the roof of a brick kiln at the Layton plant of the Kier Manufacturing Company fell yesterday, Jack Stauffer, an employe, was painfully injured. Debris was removed in time to prevent suffocation.

MILK AND ICE FUND NOW NOT FAR FROM $2,000

IT WON'T be long now until the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Milk and Ice Fund has reached $2,000. Three gifts have given it a nice boost towards that mark today. Margaret A. Downer and Townsend N. Trees, Jr., were joint chairmen of a Heberton avenue benefit which netted the fund $40.

The first part of the evening was devoted to a musical program under the chairmanship of Peggy Jackson, in which Daisy J. Wilford, Townsend Trees, Gladys E. Hays, Betty A. Unger, Peggy Casper, Margaret Downer, Catherine Crowell, Helen Wilford and Betty Nichols participated. An hour's dancing and a sale of refreshments followed the program.

Lois Killinger, Pauline Smith, Betty Ruth and Margaret Stinson, and Dorothy and Helen Manko, Eureka street friends of the fund, were the prime movers in a playlet, lemonade and candy sale which has raised the fund to the amount of $8, and Phyllis Schab and Evelyn Anker, of Forest Hills, quenched everybody's thirst for two days, and from their proceeds have added $2.10.

STAGE AND SCREEN ACTIVITIES DETAILED IN PICTURES AND GOSSIP ABOUT PLAYERS

SKELLY SHOW FOR ALVIN

Barbara Stanwyck is one of the featured players who will support Hal Skelly in "Burlesque," which will open the new season in the Alvin on Labor Day. There will be a matinee that day.

In "Craig's Wife," which the Nixon Players will present as their last offering in the Nixon this season, beginning Monday, George Kelly, the author, brings to the stage a character we all might recognize, yet one that has been heretofore neglected by the playwrights. She is the woman to whom marriage means the possession of material things.

Feminine members of George Sharp's company in the Pitt will have ample opportunity to display beautiful clothes in "It's a Boy," which will be presented next week. The production is a comedy, written by William Anthony McGuire.

ODD FELLOWS ON HOMER SMITH TRIP

Members of the Buggy Riders' Club will hold their annual outing tonight on the excursion steamer Homer Smith. Everett Merrill's orchestra will play the dance music. The boat has been chartered for an all-day trip tomorrow by the Kiski Valley I. O. O. F. The steamer will leave at 8 a. m. and go to Rock Springs Park, Chester, W. Va., returning at midnight. The Odd Fellows have chartered a special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad to make the trip to Pittsburgh.

CHICAGO WOMAN HEADS FRATERNAL CONGRESS

TORONTO, Ontario, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—S. J. Dunn, of Chicago, was elected president of the National Fraternal Congress here. Miss Frances Buell Olsen, of St. Paul, Minn., was chosen vice president.

SMILING STAR -:- HERE SHE IS AGAIN -:- KNOW THESE TWO?

Here's Madge Bellamy, who sacrifices beauty for art in "Mother Knows Best." She does two impersonations.

We thought we'd fool you. This isn't Al Jolson at all, but our Madge in one of her impersonations.

And in this one Madge has donned kilts and bowed her legs, for the film script said she must look like Sir Harry Lauder.

Now meet two tramps in "Beggars of Life." One is Louise Brooks in boy's clothes. And, of course, you recognize Wallace Beery.

William Farnum in Stage Cast Of "Hamlet" Which Barrymore Will Produce on West Coast

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 24.

"HOW happy I could be with either, were other dear charmer away," might very well have been the sentiment of John Barrymore, busy as he is kept devoting his time and talent to both stage and screen. John, of course, is greatly interested in movies, and his most lucrative future is bound up in them. Just the same, the opportunity to play "Hamlet," in the Hollywood Bowl pleases him mightily, and every hour away from the studio and his picture business is devoted to his plans for the Shakespearean production.

Thus far a number of film people have been engaged for roles in the play. Alec Francis, William Farnum, Montagu Love are among them, and more will come. The greatest difficulty thus far encountered is in the selection of an "Ophelia." She must be a Mary Astor type, but must have stage experience and dramatic ability which has been demonstrated in the theater. It is probable that some one will be brought on from New York, unless one of the local stock companies has an acceptable candidate.

Joan Crawford and Nils Asther have been selected to play the leading roles in Director Fred Niblo's next picture. It is a screen version of "Adrienne Lecouvre." Aileen Pringle has been cast for an important part for some time, and Warner Oland has also been secured for the photodrama.

Baclanova is learning. In Hollywood film contracts are secured through agents. And according to report the chap engaged by the promising Russian star was instrumental in "selling" Olga to Paramount over a period of five years. All these "long-term" contracts contain option clauses, however, which must be exercised if the star is to continue. Now Olga's agent alleges that when her first option was taken up, she declared that she did not care to pay any more commissions, and that because of her lack of knowledge of English she did not understand the contract with the agent. The result, up to the present, is that the agent has tied up Baclanova's pay envelopes pending a court hearing in October. According to the agent, one of the exhibits for his side of the case may be a sound-film test of the star which displays a very good knowledge of the language.

The vaudeville tour of the Coogans, Jackie, Sr., and Jackie, Jr., will take them abroad after their appearances in the U. S. A. There will be at least a month in Paris and I understand, a similar stop in London.

CONQUERS CANAL

OCEAN TO OCEAN TRIP FINISHED BY AUTHOR

PANAMA, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Richard Halliburton, American author, has completed a swim through the Panama Canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"I'm glad it's over," he said when he drew himself out of the water at the Balboa docks. A crowd cheered.

Swimming the canal is no small task for persons of ordinary ability in the water, Halliburton said. The worst part of the swim, which the writer completed yesterday afternoon, was through Miraflores Lake, where he encountered a strong adverse current, forcing greater exertion and slowing his speed.

The swimmer covered seven miles yesterday, but was not in the water as long as usual, due to assistance from the tide after leaving the last lock of Miraflores and entering the sea level channel, where the ebbing water helped him along.

Halliburton estimates his actual swimming time in navigating the canal was 50 hours. The distance is less than 50 miles. He began the journey August 14, swimming each day and resting at night.

"Despite many discomforts such as are to be expected in an undertaking of this kind, I enjoyed the experience thoroughly," the author said. "I learned more about the canal in a few days than I could have learned otherwise in many months."

TENNESSEEAN CHOSEN DENTISTS' PRESIDENT

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 24.—(A.P.)—Dr. R. R. Bogle, of Nashville, Tenn., was named president-elect of the American Dental Association at the final meeting of the house of delegates here late yesterday. Dr. Bogle will take office immediately following the convention next year. The dentists also selected Washington, D. C., as the 1929 convention city. Dr. Harry Nelson, of Minneapolis; Dr. E. J. Jordan, of Little Rock, Ark., and Dr. Harry Bear, of Richmond, Va., were elected vice presidents. Dr. Percy Howe, of Boston, Mass., was formally installed as president.

Weather Conditions.

Low pressure, in the form of a narrow trough stretches from Eastern Ontario southwestward over the Ohio Valley states to Arkansas. It is producing cloudy weather over most of the eastern half of the country, and showers and thunderstorms from the eastern plains states to the Appalachian Mountains and from the Great Lakes to Texas. The rains were light to moderately heavy except in Southern Missouri and in Western Arkansas, where heavy rains occurred.

The western high pressure area spread eastward and southward. It now covers the northern and central plains states and most of the Rocky Mountain states, with its crest over Western Kansas. It is attended by mostly clear skies, and moderately cold weather. Light frost occurred in Western Nebraska, Minnesota and North Dakota, and freezing temperatures in Southern Manitoba.

River Conditions.

The rivers are at low stages and about stationary. Stage at Pittsburgh is 10.9 feet; Dam No. 2, 8.1; Dam No. 6, 7.8 feet. The dams are up.

WOMAN SQUIRE NOT AT FAULT

Not Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan of Sewickley, but the District Attorney's office was to blame for Frank Barrett's needlessly languishing in jail for a month. This developed late yesterday when a document in the case that Mrs. Morgan was accused of having failed to file was found, mislaid, in the District Attorney's office, by Special Assistant District Attorney Viers D. Edwards.

Earlier in the day Judge Elder W. Marshall had ordered that Mrs. Morgan be brought into court next Thursday because of her alleged negligence, to be lectured about her duties.

Barrett, a resident of Brownsville avenue, had been held for court by Justice Morgan as an accessory to the alleged theft of an automobile by Charles Fenwick. Fenwick was arraigned some time ago, but released on parole when the owner of the machine, a fellow member of a Mt. Washington club, stated he was satisfied the accused man had not stolen the car but borrowed it without permission.

Barrett's case was forgotten until his attorney directed attention to it yesterday. Judge Marshall discharged him on his own recognizance. On being informed that Mrs. Morgan's failure to file a return in the case had been the cause of the man's long detention Judge Marshall ordered that she be hailed into court.

Shortly afterward the missing paper was found.

"No Other Store Had Them"

A customer told us recently of shopping all over town for "Plateau Mirrors," which are now so popular for table decoration, without success, until she came to Horne's, where she found excellent selection in both our Glassware and Mirror Sections. The latter section has a particularly large selection at $4.50 upwards.

This is just an illustration of the superiority of Horne stocks where the newer and smarter things are concerned.

New Finger-Ring Pouch Bag, $18.00

A bag that is both flat and roomy! What smarter or more practical combination could be devised for a shopping bag! A corded gusset provides the extra space without altering the silhouette. Fashioned of soft calf or suede with metal ornament and ring. In black, brown, beige, gray, or wine.

. . . Horne's, Main Floor . . .

Costume Slips of Rayon-and-Cotton $1.00

Good-looking tailored slips of a firmly-woven lustrous fabric, finished with a hemstitched casing and an 8-inch hem. With side pleats for fullness. In flesh or white. Sizes 34 to 44.

Lizard Footwear Finds New Ways to Be Smart

Lizard is such a well-liked shoe material, that it continues to be fashionably important, and here one finds it with style changes which give it a new attractiveness for Fall.

The two beautiful models pictured come in black or brown lizard, combined with matching suede; with gold kid piping on the brown shoes, and silver kid on the black ones.

They are priced $14.50; lizard shoes range from $10.00 to $22.50.

. . . Horne's, Fourth Floor . . .

Cotton Broadcloth Smocks

Special $1.00

Copen, green and rose are available in these inexpensive smocks. More and more of them are being worn, not only in place of aprons around the house, but to protect the clothes of business women during office hours as well. These are nicely finished, and come in three sizes.

August Overcoat Sale

Tomorrow Morning

$28.50 $36.50 $48.50

Every overcoat is NEW—the coming season's models; all made within the last 30 to 90 days.

There are both topcoat and overcoat weights.

There is a full complement of regular sizes in each model and there are models for large men in sizes up to 48.

The fabrics are all-wool tweeds, fleeces, Vicunas, Meltons, and high-grade imported novelties. Coats full satin trimmed, with satin sleeves, yokes and piping. The Chesterfields are full satin lined.

Blue and Oxford gray, the favored shades for the coming season, predominate, with a representation also of other shades.

Selections held for later delivery, if desired!

But see the overcoats—and the prices, that is the best way to convince yourself of the wisdom of buying now.

August Fur Sale

Young women are buying furs with great enthusiasm, in the Sale at Horne's, because every coat in the vast, varied collection is a new 1928-29 model, because prices are graded to keep within the range of even the most modest allowance, and because so much attention has been given to the subject of youthful requirement.

Sheared Sheep Coats—$59.50
Sheared Lamb Coats—$95.00

These coats are among the very newest and most popular novelties in the Sale.

The Sheared Sheep Coats come in mottled gray, and are lined with suede-cloth and trimmed with suede leather.

The Sheared Lamb Coats, in gray or beige, have linings and shoulder scarf of real Scotch clan plaids to give an added touch of gaiety and animation.

Muffs to match the coats.....$8.50

There's Time Saturday Morning to Select, Leisurely, in the August Furniture Sale

There are the long morning hours when the store is not so crowded, giving home-makers splendid opportunity to see the furniture, to study pieces, to try out big comfortable chairs and davenports, to examine the workmanship and beautiful woods, and make their selections.

There is a variety both of styles and prices in the sale, that is highly gratifying to those who prefer to select all their furniture here.

Visit the Dream Cottage

A helpful display that shows in practical manner how a small house may be furnitured comfortably, artistically and at small cost.

Ask About the Deferred Payment Plan

This plan permits you to make a moderate first payment, with the balance payable in convenient amounts over a number of months. The Credit Department will be glad to explain it to you.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Few of "400" Home From Summer Resorts Yet Except Those Getting Children Ready for School

THROUGHOUT the city in the sections where the "400" dwell, there is a calm—the sort of calm that precedes something really interesting, in this case the fall social season. Just now the only folks in town are those who had to hurry back to superintend the fall shopping and packing for their children for whom fall means school days once more. There are a few stay-at-homes down in Sewickley. And really one can't question their decision to stay in that lovely valley instead of in one of the well-known resorts, for in no place, I daresay, could there be found more beautiful estates than those laid out on Sewickley Heights.

During the coming week folks will begin to return slowly from Canada, from Saratoga Springs, from Watch Hill, from Bar Harbor and Dark Harbor, and all the other playgrounds of society folks in the good old summertime. Not until early September will there be, however, a "quorum" of Pittsburgh's society folks, I think.

THE Ewing sons and daughter are among those returning from adventurous summers. There must be a hint of Ulysses in their ancestral background, for they seemed to be imbued with his spirit "to sail beyond the baths of all the western stars." At least they have started in rather young, and have examined all the little nooks and crannies of Europe.

Barbara, the only daughter, I believe, of the Thomas Ewings, who live on St. James place, spent the summer abroad with a group of friends. Her brother, Lewis J. Ewing, met her in France, I hear, and accompanied her home. And Thomas Ewing, Jr., the elder son, has just returned from a European tour, with the emphasis on France. His traveling companion was Henry Mason Reed, son of the George Reeds, of Bayard street. Thomas Ewing is a Williams man, and Mason Reed, as he is known to his friends, is a Yale man, class of '26.

And the parents of the Ewing family have not stayed at home all summer either. They've just got back from Nantucket, R. I.

THIS year there have been more folks than usual in Pittsburgh attracted by Bay Head. Just now Thomas J. Gillespie and his daughter Eleanor are at this popular society resort.

* * *

AT the very time some folks are beginning to return, there are others who are visiting another summer resort before fall comes in earnest. Mrs. Winfield K. Shiras has just gone to Narragansett Pier. She is staying at the De Laplage.

The polo is now the center of interest at the Pier.

ASHEVILLE always has its following. Just now Mrs. Charles Arbuthnot, Jr., and her daughter Elizabeth are there visiting Charles Arbuthnot III.

* * *

MRS. ALFRED E. JENKINS did not remain long at Spring Lake, N. J. In the middle of the week she returned to New York, and is stopping at the St. Regis.

Another Pittsburgher at the St. Regis is Mrs. Henry Clay Frick. Mrs. Frick returned Wednesday to New York after spending the season at her summer home at Fride's Crossing, Mass.

MISS LUCILLE MARGARET BEGGS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Beggs, of McCurdy place, Ben Avon, has selected Saturday, September 8, as the date for her marriage to John Richardson Dierst, Jr., of Swissvale. The wedding will take place in the home of the bride's parents with the Rev. Dr. W. R. Wilson, of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, as officiant.

Mrs. Oliver Lyle Burns, of Ben Avon, entertained recently in her home for her sister, Miss Beggs.

MISS OLIVER BROUGHER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Brougher, of Delaware avenue, Swissvale, and Victor H. Kholhaas, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Kohlhaas, of Westmoreland avenue, Swissvale, were married Tuesday afternoon in St. John's Lutheran Church, Swissvale. Miss Edith Brougher was her sister's only attendant, and Edward Blooman, of Sharon, was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Following a motor trip to Buffalo and Cleveland Mr. and Mrs. Kohlhaas will be at home on Westmoreland avenue.

THE marriage of Miss Marguerite Rintoul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Rintoul, Carnegie Place, East End, and Charles Harrell Youngstrom, of San Francisco, took place yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Schenley, with the Rev. Tage Teison, of Devonshire street, officiating. Miss Nancy and Miss Maisie Rintoul, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids, and Albert E. La Poe, of Detroit, was best man, and George Pierce and Benjamin Clarke were ushers. After an eastern trip Mr. and Mrs. Youngstrom will be at home in Berkley, Cal.

MR. AND MRS. PHILIP AMENT, of Homestead Park, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elsie Olive Ament, and Walter S. Rearick, of Tarentum, which took place Wednesday at noon with the Rev. J. M. Rearick, father of the bridegroom, as officiant. Mr. and Mrs. Rearick, upon their return from an eastern trip, will be at home on Riverview drive, Parnassus.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. J. A. ADAMS, of Holmes street, Wilkinsburg, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Thelma M. Adams, to Reuel B. Wolford, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wolford, also of Wilkinsburg. A fall wedding is planned.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES W. BLACK, of Martin avenue, Mt. Lebanon, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Marie Black, to Cecil C. Robbins, of Pittsburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Robbins, of Beloit, Wis.

* * *

MISS KATHERINE HENNINGER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Henninger, of Braddock avenue, will leave shortly to enter Cornell. Mr. and Mrs. Henninger's son, Philip, will go to Ann Arbor this year.

Patricia Pitt

RECEPTION TO OPEN WELLESLEY CLUB YEAR

THE Wellesley Club of Pittsburgh will begin its season with a reception in the home of Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, the tentative date being Saturday afternoon, October 6. Honors will be shared by the new officers of the club and the executive committee of the National Alumnae Association, of which Mrs. Walter Church is president. Mrs. Anna Laura Cree will sing, accompanied by Mrs. Martha Meyers Murdoch, and there will be college talks by members of the executive committee and the graduate councillor, Mrs. Thomas Pomeroy. Mrs. F. F. Rohrer is the new president of the club, Mrs. Merle Hoon is vice president; Mrs. George I. Harter, secretary, and Miss Sara Lewis, treasurer.

* * *

A RESUME of Pittsburgh club activities was given by Mrs. Mayme Evans in a talk before the South Hills Woman's Club in the Congress of Clubs yesterday. The occasion was the club's annual luncheon and was in honor of Mrs. Mayme James, the retiring president, and Mrs. Evans, who is both her predecessor and successor, having been elected to the executive chair for another term. Miss Lenore DeBold was again the toastmistress and the speakers were Mrs. J. C. DeNoon, president of the New Future Association, and Mrs. A. P. Allen, a former member of the board of registration. Mrs. DeNoon told of the splendid work at the New Future Home, which, by the way, is to have Mrs. E. S. H. McCauley, state secretary of public welfare, as honor guest at its annual donation day next month, and she urged the women to vote for the $50,000,000 welfare bond issue at the November election. Mrs. Allen also stressed the duties of women at the polls. Music was furnished by Mrs. Mary Smith and Mrs. Clare Rowland, sopranos, and Mrs. George Stevenson, contralto, with Mrs. Marie Kennedy accompanying. Mrs. Martha Benjamin contributed readings.

NEWLYWED

MRS. MARTIN SNYDERMAN

Mrs. Martin Snyderman, of Phillips avenue, was Miss Harriet Felsenthal before her marriage on August 9.

MRS. JOHN M. IRWIN, new president of the Colloquium Club, and her family, returned the first of the week from Cape May, where they had been occupying a cottage this summer. Miss Laura Green, the retiring president of the club, is at her home in Granville, O., and Miss Letitia Bennett, also a past president, is summering in California.

STANDING committees of the Monday Club of Carnegie this year will be: Program, Mrs. J. C. Altland, Mrs. W. N. Andrews, Mrs. J. M. Wishart; social, Mrs. H. F. Botsford, Mrs. George Z. Hosack, Mrs. George McFarland; music, Mrs. Arthur W. Schreiber, Mrs. W. H. Roberts, Mrs. Oliver Mackie; reference, Mrs. A. A. Beard, Mrs. M. Carnahan, Mrs. G. N. Riley; visiting, Mrs. T. E. Marshell, Mrs. E. D. Grenkel, Mrs. E. J. Doudna; press, Mrs. John H. Moore; auditors, Mrs. N. L. Glasser and Mrs. W. H. Shinn. The executive committee is comprised of the officers, Mrs. J. H. Mulvey, Mrs. Ralph Wright, Mrs. H. S. Kane, Mrs. Arba G. Williamson, Mrs. C. E. Gullette, Jr., and Mrs Jacob Bradwell, together with Mrs Altland, Mrs Andrews and Mrs. Wishart.

MRS. R. M. EWING and Mrs. R. D. Beardsley, both members of the Keystone Chapter, Daughters of American Pioneers, accompanied by Judge Ewing and Mr. Beardsley, have returned from a motor trip that took them to Edgehill, N. H., Kennebunkport, Me., and Boston. They stopped in each one of these places and touched every New England state en route.

ANNOUNCING the new Radiola Super-Heterodyne with A.C. electric operation

Everybody has been waiting for it.

And here it is—the first of the new "60" series of RCA Super-Heterodynes with A.C. operation.

It looked like an easy problem—to the layman. Super-Heterodyne plus A.C. tubes equals A.C. Super-Heterodyne.

But the engineers at General Electric and Westinghouse and in the RCA Research Laboratories—with all the world's knowledge of radio at their command—took a year to solve it.

Not merely to design a receiver that would be worthy to bear the RCA mark of excellence, but one that would be a step beyond any receiver ever built.

The super-selectivity of the famous RCA Super-Heterodyne—recognized as the highest development of the radio art—is now combined with the unrivalled simplicity and dependability of A.C. electric operation, so successfully used in the nationally popular Radiola 18.

And at a price only possible because of the superior manufacturing resources of the Radio Corporation of America—the world's largest producer of radio instruments.

Radiola 60, first of the new series of RCA Super-Heterodynes, is a table model to be used with any high-quality loudspeaker (RCA Loudspeaker 100A or the new 103 shown in the illustration).

Cabinet models, with special built-in dynamic loudspeakers of hitherto unachieved tone and range, will be announced shortly.

Any RCA Radiola Dealer will gladly demonstrate the new Radiola 60 for you—in your home.

Radiolas may readily be purchased on the RCA Time Payment Plan.

WOMAN CRACKS HEAD IN CELL

Overcome with remorse, Mrs. Ruth Cotter, 27, of 22 Pasture way, beat her head on the concrete floor of her cell in North Side Police Station early today and suffered a probable fracture of the skull. She is in Allegheny General Hospital.

The woman was arrested at 620 West General Robinson street with Robert Ca r, Negro, whom she accused of stealing her valise. A few moments after she was lodged in the police station the matron was attracted by a noise and found the woman beating her head on the floor.

'SURE, I AM GOING ALONG,' SAYS 'QUEEN OF DIAMONDS'

International News Service.

DESSAU, Germany, Aug. 24.—On the first leg of a flight from Europe to America, Charles Levine and Bert Acosta took off from the Dessau flying field at 3:31 p. m. today for London.

MABEL GOING TOO

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—In a telegram to Miss Mabel Boll here, Charles A. Levine, who plans a trans-Atlantic flight to America, announced he would land at Croydon Airdrome at 7 p. m., today, flying from Dessau, Germany.

Levine announced yesterday that he would attempt the ocean crossing in a new Junkers plane which was delivered to him and the American aviator, Bert Acosta, at Dessau early this week.

"I certainly am going with Mr. Levine if he flies to America," Miss Boll told The Associated Press, "but I am not sure he intends flying over."

RUSSELLTON MAN DROWNS IN CANADA

Falling from a canoe into a lake near Whitney, Ontario, while fishing, John Evans, 38, master mechanic for the Republic Iron and Steel Company at Russellton, was drowned Tuesday, according to word received here by his family. The body will arrive at his home tomorrow. Evans' guide, also immersed, was rescued.

With several other Russellton residents, Evans had gone north on a fishing expedition, but the others stopped at a camp 80 miles south of Whitney.

HELD IN FRAUD, OUT ON BAIL

Myer Harrison, of Wheeling, W. Va., arrested at Liberty avenue and Seventh street several days ago on a warrant charging him with being a fugitive from justice, was released on $5,000 bail today, pending extradition to West Virginia.

Seven indictments have been returned against Harrison in Wheeling. W. R. Bleifus, Wheeling meat dealer, accuses him of obtaining money by false pretenses. Harrison it is alleged, sold stock in the Federal Enamel Company of McKees Rocks, and also 10 parcels of Florida real estate by misrepresenting the value.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ONLY A MEMORY

By EVANGELINE WEIR

DANIEL OLIVER was going home to Marblehead, to the quaint old town which he had not seen for 10 years. When he left it to take a position with a big firm on the Pacific Coast he promised Grace Snow that he would return at the end of a year. There had been no words to bind them for Grace had been his sweetheart ever since the carefree days when they played around the old Fort and climbed over the rocks in the harbor.

Many letters passed between them the first year, then his firm sent him to Africa for a time and letters were few, long delayed and often lost until at last they stopped altogether. Dan returned to the Coast and became a member of the firm. In the rush for success and wealth, he rarely thought of the old town by the sea or of his old playmate.

But now that he was going back, the years seemed to fall away and old desires which had slept long and undisturbed were awakened. He could scarcely wait to see the crooked streets, to wander down to the sea where the harbor was filled with boats; to walk around the old Fort and watch the incoming tide as it rushed against the high rocks.

And Grace! He thought of her as in the old days and smiled as memories came back like the scent of dried rose petals. How fond they had been of each other! He had danced and flirted with women during the years but the game of making money had taken up his time—all of his time. Now, he would marry Grace. In the last letter his aunt had written him two years ago, she had told him that his old sweetheart was still single. Too bad he had to neglect her in the great game of business. Of course she had waited; it was her nature to wait; to give rather than to take. And with the old memory came the old tenderness.

Dan Oliver arrived in town at sunset and walked to the edge of the shore. He was confident that Grace would be there—in the little summer-house which stood on the highest point among the rocks. As a child she had loved to go there and watch the sunset; to look down at the old town with its quaint houses; to see the beautiful harbor and the sea beyond the fort. Together they had gone there to watch the sea and shadows falling on the old town when they were no longer boy and girl. Grace would be there—waiting. He had so much to give her now!

Grace was there. He saw her as he stood at the foot of the hill and looked up. She sat, as he had seen her so often in the old days, with her chin cupped in her hand gazing out to sea. Something stirred within him, something which had been a long time asleep, and he climbed quickly and eagerly the steep path and stood face to face with his old sweetheart.

She knew him at once, but did not move nor speak.

"The prodigal has returned, Grace," he said, holding out an eager hand.

She ignored the hand, but retorted lightly:

"You should have sent us word so that the fatted calf would be waiting."

"I am a pentitent sinner, Grace."

"As you look prosperous, we shall accept you at the value the years have added. Let me be the first to welcome you home, Dan." Then she gave her hand.

Her touch sent a thrill through him. The years had improved Grace, and he felt that she was a woman any man might be proud to call wife. There was no need to educate her taste. He wondered how she had managed in the old town with the long, quiet evenings spent with her uncle and aunt.

"You are lovely, Grace," he said aloud, showing his admiration in eyes and voice.

"We follow closely in the footsteps of the summer people we once despised. I even know enough to be admitted to the society on the Neck."

"Is Marblehead Neck as exclusive as ever?" he asked.

She looked across the bay to the stately Neck with a smile on her lips which he could not fathom.

He sat down beside her in the little summer-house with a feeling a deep content, and watched the sun sink below the horizon leaving an afterglow on sky and sea. In the fading light long shadows fell; lights in the harbor sparkled like jewels; below them the old town crept close to the sea clothed in the mystery of gathering darkness.

"Marblehead never loses its beauty by day or night," Grace said softly. "How I long for it when I am far away."

"You do not live here? I thought you were a part of it."

"I am, but I have a position which calls me away for the greater part of the year."

"I cannot think of you as living anywhere but 'up to my girl's house on Tucker street,' as I used to call it."

"You must expect many changes in 10 years, Dan."

"It seems but yesterday," he answered.

"The town has changed very little. It looks the same outside but inside old things have passed away—the collectors and tourists have carried them off."

She spoke lightly, but there was an undertone—sadness, regret, or was it resentment?

"Grace," he said softly, "we have drifted apart, but the tide has brought us back to the shore—the tide never fails."

Her answer was quick and unexpected.

"But boats go down at sea often never to return. The tide cannot always wash them ashore," she said softly. "They are only the wrecks of something which were once ships of Hope."

He was sure of her now, and his voice carried confidence and power.

"I have come back in a ship laden with all the good things of the world: riches, position, power and love. You are to sail away—away to the castles in the air we used to build. Do you remember, Grace?"

"What a care-free boy and girl we were! But the years bring a knowledge which gives us a different value of life."

"We are boy and girl together on the rocks of that old Fort, Grace," he pleaded.

"I am a woman sitting in a house on Marblehead Neck or in a yacht in the harbor. I belong on the other side now. I never go up Tucker street."

Her words troubled him, but before he could speak a car stopped at the foot of the hill. She got up quickly.

"It is my husband," she explained. "He promised to come for me when I was through with my moon worship. He calls me a pagan and this my altar."

"You are married?"

"I have moved from Tucker street to the Neck."

"Are you happy—over there, Grace?"

"Tucker street is only a memory now; the Neck is a reality."

Then she slipped away, and Dan Oliver walked through the crooked, narrow streets until he reached a little street which climbed a hill and lost itself among the rocks. He took off his hat as he stood there in the moonlight looking at what he used to call "my girl's house—and he dreamed dreams, of what might have been.

How I Bleach My Skin White

"The camera is a merciless eye," says Miss Genevieve Barr, noted New York model, "and we girls who have to face it have a method of our own for keeping our skins white and flawless.

"We buy no ready-made preparations, but get three ounces of Orchard White at the drug store and add to this the juice of two lemons. This makes several weeks' supply of a very fine skin bleach which softens, refines and whitens the skin without any harm or irritation. And because you use it while it is still fresh, it is twice as effective as any ready-to-use preparation. I find it a dandy bleach for tan and freckles, too. Every girl who takes up posing in New York sooner or later learns this studio secret. The bleach costs only a few cents to make."

The Prince of Wales — His Story.

No Longer Considered Mere Boy, But Bears Dignity And Obligations

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

His Royal Highness, Edward, Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne, was born at White Lodge, Richmond, in midsummer of 1894, the son of the Duchess and Duke of York, now King George V. It was in the early days of Queen Victoria's fifty-eighth year of sovereignty. Guilty of much mischief during his childhood days, he was often punished. When he grew older he was sent to Osborne Naval College, where he made rapid progress in his studies. Indulging in a fist fight with a classmate he gets a black eye.

"Edward P."

By WALTER AND LEONARD TOWNSEND

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IV.

IT was at the Coronation of his father and mother that Prince Edward, now Prince of Wales owing to his father's succession to the throne, made his first real State appearance clad in all the robes and glamour of his Royal rank.

PRINCE OF WALES

For the first time the young Prince—now a full Cadet in the Royal Navy—was to don the coronet which belonged to his position as elder son of the reigning Sovereign, and the mere fact that this circlet of gold and jewels was more elaborate than either that worn by his sister or his brothers brought home to him the offical difference in his station from theirs.

Five of the Royal children were present at the Coronation of King George and Queen Mary, the fifth son, little Prince John, being too young to be present. Although a little awed by the splendor of the robes they were to wear, the five Royal children, the Prince of Wales, Princess Mary, Prince Albert, Prince Henry and Prince George, looked forward eagerly to the event.

Brothers Start Mischief

The four Princes and the Princess were to drive unattended in one of the state coaches, and when Queen Alexandra heard of this she advised the King and Queen to send someone to supervise their conduct.

It was too late, however, and, on the great day, the Prince of Wales in his robes of red and ermine of the Order of the Garter and with his heavily bejeweled coronet on his young boyish head staggered into the gilt-covered state carriage followed by Princess Mary in blue velvet with ermine train and small coronet resting rather precariously on the top of her mass of fair hair. Prince Albert, Prince Henry and Prince George in state robes followed.

The Prince of Wales and Princess Mary occupied the back seat with the three younger Princes sitting in a row opposite them. No sooner had the state carriage left Buckingham Palace than Prince Henry and Prince George began to nudge each other and giggle at the decorous and upright bearing of their elder brother and Princess Mary. The faces of the Prince of Wales and his sister grew redder and redder with anger at the teasing.

Princess Mary snarply remonstrated with her brothers, but her shocked reproof fell on unheeding ears—"Bertie," "Harry" and "George" were beginning to enjoy themselves. All the time the great carriage was being drawn between the lines of upright guards and the cheering masses of the people.

Prince George, sitting opposite Princess Mary, now made an attempt to tickle her and in the effort he slipped off the leather seat to the floor of the coach.

Princess Mary, stooping to pick him up, lost her coronet which rolled to the floor. For a moment all was confusion—then the Prince of Wales chivalrously retrieved his sister's coronet and, placing it on her head, sharply told his brothers that if they did not behave he would administer there and then the necessary chastisement to enforce such conduct.

Once in Westminster Abbey the royal children were awed into the most decorous behavior. The Prince of Wales particularly carried through his duties as heir to the throne in the most dignified and impressive manner.

Seated on the right hand of His Majesty the King, the Prince revealed now the value of all the careful training which he owed to the clever Mr. Hansell. Not once did he falter or make a mistake and the high officers of state present said afterwards that the most impressive moment was when the young Prince knelt before his father to render homage to the crown.

Embraced by Father

As he rose to touch the crown upon the King's head, his father embraced him affectionately, kissing him on the right cheek. By this act, the King reminded his son that love and affection can find a place amidst even the most dignified and formal ceremonies.

Once outside the Abbey the young Prince Albert, Henry and George regained their good spirits and recommenced the teasing of their elder brother and sister.

As the great state carriage made its way up Whitehall, Prince Albert and Prince Henry finding that three on one seat were rather a crowd unceremoniously placed their younger brother, Prince George, underneath, and it was in this uncomfortable position that he had to travel back to Buckingham Palace. But for the bands of the Brigade of Guards and the cheering of the crowds his cries of protest must have been heard by the occupants of the other royal carriages.

When "Cadet Edward of Wales" left the Royal Naval College, Dartmouth, on the ever of his sixteenth birthday, to spend a few days at Marlborough House, he realized but dimly that the purple robes of state were already waiting to enfold him in their historic folds.

But already his father had ordered Letters Patent to be passed, a proclamation which forcibly brought home to him the fact that he was now no longer only the son of a ruling king, but in himself the possessor of an important series of titles which carried with them dignities and obligations not lightly to be regarded.

The day following his birthday the simple but solemn service of Confirmation, for which he had been duly prepared by the Rev. H. Dixon Wright, R. N. (who later was killed in the Battle of Jutland), was performed in the private chapel at Windsor Castle in the presence of the King and Queen and other members of the royal family, together with a few specially invited guests.

The queen mother made the important event an occasion for her first public appearance since the death of her beloved husband and while at Windsor visited the resting place of the late monarch and placed a wreath on his coffin.

After the royal party had partaken of lunch in the State dining room at the Castle, they slowly filed into the private chapel and took their seats before the altar. The King and Queen, Princess Mary and Prince Albert sat on the Prince's right with the Queen-Mother and Empress Marie on the left. After Sir Walter Parratt, master of the King's music, had played a few opening bars on the organ, the service commenced with the singing of "Fight the Good Fight." The Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Dean of Windsor and Canon Dalton, then read the office, and the young Prince answered those well-known questions in that firm, convincing voice which today marks him as a good public speaker. The prelate offered an inspiring message emphasizing the need of lofty chivalry in everyday life, and indefatigable service to both God and man. The Prince listened with rapt attention, and joined fervently in the hymn, "O Jesus I Have Promised," which closed the service. After the benediction had been pronounced, the royal party left the chapel.

The following day, the Prince received his first celebration of Holy Communion.

The confirmation of a young boy is usually considered to be of a private nature, but in the case of Prince Edward it could not altogether remain so—the eyes and ears of the whole country were with him in that little chapel.

The Prince of Wales returned to Dartmouth with happy memories of his birthday. Apart from the gifts of his parents, a gold watch from his father and a camera from his mother, Queen Alexandra and other members of the royal family, there had been scores of congratulatory telegrams, each of them a loyal admission that his progress and movements were being followed by the whole nation.

But there was a more wistful side to all this celebration—the knowledge that he was no longer looked upon as a boy-prince, but as a member of the state with serious work awaiting him in the near future. And Prince Edward had no wish to grow up yet. "David" experienced, for a little while, an unreal, unsettled confusion of mind.

Prince Edward found, too, that a subtle barrier had arisen between himself and his colleagues.

BOY HIT BY QUOIT DIES

Struck on the head with a quoit while watching a game in an alley near his home last Wednesday, James Appell, 10, of 1406 Hamilton avenue, McKeesport, died in the McKeesport Hospital today.

The quoit, said to have been pitched wild, went the regulation distance before hitting "Jimmie." His skull was not fractured, but a blood clot formed. An operation was performed last night.

The dead boy is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Appell, a brother, Carl, Jr., and a sister, Dorothy Appell.

$5 SCALE SIGNED BY OHIO MINERS, OWNERS

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The first definite step toward settlement of the Ohio coal strike was a reality today. A wage agreement was reached yesterday between United Mine Workers' officials and a group of operators, most of them belonging to the Central Ohio Operators Association.

The backbone of the wage dispute, which thrust Ohio mines into idleness a year ago last April, remains to be broken, however, for the agreement does not affect the Ohio Coal Operators' Association, controllers of the major portion of the state's mines.

About 14 mines, four in the Hocking Valley, one in the Eastern Ohio district and the remainder in Tuscarawas county, employing from 3,000 to 3,500 miners, are concerned in the agreement. The contract, dating September 1 and terminating March 31, 1930, is on a basis of $5 a day and 70 cents a ton for cutting and loading.

No mention was made in the agreement of a "continuously competitive scale," a stumbling block in all previous conferences and attempts to organize conferences.

That some cognizance of this competition was taken, however, is indicated in the provision made by the agreement for establishment of a sub-committee to study conditions in Ohio and adjoining states relating to the coal industry. The subcommittee is to meet about the first of November and make an extensive research, reporting to a joint conference of miners and operators the second week of February, 1930, and recommending at that time a wage scale it will have agreed upon.

TONS OF IRON CRUSH MILL MAN TO DEATH

CHARLEROI, Pa., Aug. 24.—Crushed under tons of scrap iron which fell from a crane at the open hearth mills of the Pittsburgh Steel Company plant in Monessen, Mike Glova, 37, died in the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital. He leaves a wife and three children.

Missing

ELIZABETH GLOATZ

Missing Persons Bureau has been asked to aid in the search for Elizabeth Gloatz, 16, pretty five-foot blonde, who disappeared recently from her home, 4022 Willow street, Lawrenceville. The request was made by Charles Gloatz, father of the girl. The father believes she is working in the Pittsburgh district.

20 TO FLY TOMORROW TO RACES

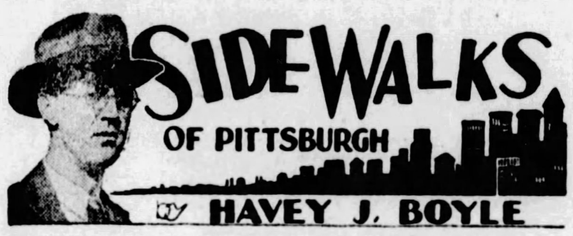
Eastward air lines will hum tomorrow with the roar of 20 airplanes bound for the Altoona Speedway races, which is attracting entries from all of Western Pennsylvania.

Practically all active fliers in the Aero Club of Pittsburgh will compete in the races, along with a score of other pilots from various points in the state. Planes will land inside the Speedway.

A total of $600 in cash prizes will be awarded in two races and a landing precision contest, the latter limited to members of the Three Hundred Twenty-fourth Observation Squadron from Rodgers Field. The races will consist of a 50-mile free-for-all and a 25-mile race limited to 90-horsepower, three-place planes.

Capt. John J. Feery, commandant of Flight B, Three Hundred Twenty-fourth Squadron, will be master of ceremonies. Raymond M. Marlier, twice president of the Aero Club and now chairman of the Chamber of Commerce aeronautics committee, will be chairman of the judges' committee.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH



by HAVEY J. BOYLE

NO case in recent times has aroused the interest of local police, as has the Dapper murder. Aside from considerations of duty, county detectives are attracted to solving the mysterious shooting of the young doctor. Even some of the city sleuths, although the case is beyond their jurisdiction, are spending some of their spare time in visiting the scene of the crime, and when the sleuths get together there is no other topic discussed.

* * *

We talked with a patient who was in the office while the killer was there. His description tallied with the police description. The patient remarked the nattiness, the coolness, and a certain carefulness about the stranger. The certain carefulness concerning the way he sat down, holding his coat well around his body, obviously, in the light of what occurred, to hide a bulging gun.

* * *

THE stranger, from calculations given by the patient, must have spent a half hour in the doctor's office, including time spent there before and after the patient arrived. For one who had come a long way to get a doctor in an emergency and who was supposed to be concerned with the critical illness of a wife, the stranger lacked the usual agitation.

* * *

The stranger feared no recognition, and yet the scene of the crime and his get-away in a strange car, indicated that he knew roads in the vicinity of the Lebanon Church road better than most of the natives of Carrick and adjacent territory. The roads out in the vicinity of the crime are winding and narrow, and they cross one another at numerous points. Yet the stranger who could find his way in the dark better than could a man living in surrounding territory a long time, was unafraid to visit the doctor's office with no disguise.

THE irony of the situation is that two policemen were standing on the corner near where the doctor and the stranger and the doctor's father got into the car that has since vanished, as if into space. More than that, on their way to the dark country of the crime the machine passed a police station, in front of which were more policemen and firemen.

* * *

That the doctor had some misgivings is evidenced by the call to friends living near and then the appeal to his father to accompany him. With such misgivings apparent, it is unfortunate for the doctor that he did not ask police to accompany him.

* * *

WHAT sort of a man dresses well, looks no part of a criminal and no part of a drug addict, buys a silencer for his gun and, as one story indicates, carries also a blackjack. Besides this, he was a man who was apparently familiar with auto-driving.

* * *

Here is the perfect crime and the perfect get-away under conditions that represent the murderer as one of the coolest, most deliberate and careful in the annals of crime. Was he hired to do the act? Did he acquaint himself with his territory over a long period? Could it be that, hired to kill, he made a mistake in identity? The patient who saw him says he looked no part of a gunman, as gunmen are conventionally pictured.

HERE is a mystery that has the county sleuths and the city force puzzled as they seldom have been puzzled before. Here is a chance for a detective to make a name for himself.

The scene of the murder, a lonely church on a country road, rivals any eerie setting conjured by a fictionist. Visit it late at night, recapture the story of the shooting, and you are glad to get back to the electric lights of Clairton, McKeesport, or Brentwood.

RECOGNIZE HIM?

Honestly, now, if you were asked, could you tell the name of the traffic patrolman on your corner, the one who speaks to you when you pass by? The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, if you can't, will help you a bit. Each day there is published the photograph of one of the city's traffic officers. Here is one for today. His name tomorrow!

YESTERDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS LEO CONNELL, WHO GUIDES ALL HE SEES AT PENN AND HIGHLAND AVENUES. LEO LIVES AT 318 EUCLID AVENUE, IS UNMARRIED AND HAS BEEN WITH THE TRAFFIC SQUAD FOR SEVEN MONTHS.

CHURCH THEFT SUSPECT FREED BY REDUCED FINE

Ernest Clark, 22, of New York City, who was sentenced to 90 days in the workhouse as a suspicious person by Magistrate William J. Soost, August 8, in default of a $100 fine, obtained his release today when Judge Thomas D. Carnahan reduced the fine to $25 in Common Pleas Court.

The case came before Judge Carnahan on a writ of habeas corpus, and he ruled that Magistrate Soost had exceeded his authority in imposing so severe a sentence in a suspicious person case.

Clark was arrested in the Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, Dobson and Brereton streets, when an alarm gave warning that the poor box was being tampered with. He told Judge Carnahan he went into the church to pray for the recovery of his sick mother and when he rose from the altar his elbow accidentally touched the poor box and set off the alarm. His counsel, Wesley A. Moffat, said a policeman had informed him three women had set off the alarm in the same way.

Judge Carnahan was not impressed. He remarked that the evidence was that the box had been opened.

Will Rogers Says

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Aug. 24.

This has really been a summer of acceptances; there hasn't been a refusal all year.

Why do we nominate men that are in such receptive moods? I believe we have men in this country that would promise to enter a lion's den, if they were notified to do so by a committee of what is humorously called our best citizens, and before he entered the den he could be allowed to make a speech of acceptance, length unlimited.

One snake was not notified that this dance was supposed to be religious and he bit an Indian. Intolerance is even an issue among the snakes.

Yours for the varsity drag from now on,

WILL ROGERS.

Alan's Folks Frown on the Idea of a Girl Working After Marriage

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Ione Farr, just out of high school, gets a position with Max Weimar, a music publishing house in New York. Her chum, Marie Karey, is engaged to Palmer Elliott, a young lawyer, whom she later marries. She is always holding up as a model Ione's married sister, Jenepher, who has a small son and also holds a fine position in a smart New York shop. Benz, Weimer's office manager, takes Ione to Tin Pan Alley, where she meets the famous song writer, Wolfie Speed. Ione falls in love with Alan Blake, an accompanist, and they plan to be married as soon as Blake can support her. She is inclined to be jealous of Fluff Harwick, a new girl in the office. She feels that Jenepher is proving that a wife cannot hold down a job and run a household and do both successfully. She tries to be nice to Fluff, but the latter repulses her and she has her first quarrel with Blake on account of her. At Marie's house for dinner they learn all about a 50-50 marriage. Benz makes further plans to advance Ione. He tells her jobs are not handed out through friendship but ability. Alan is made branch manager for his firm and gets a raise. He urges Ione to marry him at once. Ione insists, however, on giving her employer notice and the day is set for the wedding. Alan arrives and finds Ione in her bridal attire awaiting him. After the wedding they visit Alan's folks.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

MOTHER BLAKE ran down the steps to meet them—not at all the gray-haired, past-generation woman Ione had expected. A small, vivacious person with twinkling dark eyes and not a thread of white in her brown hair and a fresh, girlish laugh.

She kissed Alan first and called him "old fellow;" then she put her arms around Ione, holding her off for a long look before she kissed her, too.

"How pretty you are, my dear," she said. "And so much a person, Alan tells me. He always was a lucky child."

Very casual it was, some way irresponsible, rather like a sister greeting a friend her brother had brought to call. Ione was delighted.

Father Blake was a courteous, somewhat pompous man much older than his wife. His welcome was kindly and sincere; he even offered a little speech that made Ione want to giggle. Alan and his mother chatted together while he talked and the bride soon learned that the elder Blake was full of dramatic flourishes to which no one paid the slightest attention.

They were in a long, high-ceiled room, all faded hangings and spotted Venetian mirrors. A chill seemed to permeate the place; when a sour-faced maid brought in tea Ione's fingers were so stiff with cold that she hardly could hold the cup.

She spoke about it when she and Alan were unpacking their bags in the big and beautiful old-fashioned room upstairs. "Why, it's icy, Lan! How do they ever stand it? I was frozen down there and it's worse here."

"Oh," carelessly, "I s'pose Dad's saving coal. Regular indoor sport here. They threw a reception and musical the other night; probly broke 'em for a month. Anyhow its spring; ought to be warm."

"But it isn't. You mean they'd entertain expensively and go freezing? Indeed they'd not be so silly!"

He laughed. "Why not? 'Gather ye roses while ye may' is the big idea. Remember once when I was a kid we were in a jam with the gas company. They were sending to disconnect the meter unless somebody came through. Well, that very morning I broke my tennis racquet so what does mother do but give me twelve or fifteen, whatever it was for a new racquet. We went without gas for two weeks before Dad decided to sell a bond or something."

He chuckled at the memory, but she felt all through her a ripple of alarm.

Supposing Lanny had the family way of just forgetting bills? Hard to overlook it would be for her, a girl reared in the strictest standards of pay as you go.

She brought up a little sigh, made a little frightened prayer in her heart. She must soon find it out if there were that weakness in him; she must help him overcome it.

Why, she was strong enough for that! She could be the business brains of the family without ever letting him suspect it. She would see that all came right—control such a thing with her own two hands.

"Dolling up. Frills? Folks always dress for dinner. There'll be some aunts and cousins in."

"But it's so cold, Lanny."

He shot her a speculative glance and shrugged.

So she put on the sapphire velvet—the Paradise feathers that had so overwhelmed Eddie Benz. And all the while she was thinking how different Lanny seemed here in his home. It was as if he grew backward into a happy-go-lucky small boy, irresponsible as a kid out of school.

She felt a vague distrust of that charming irresponsibility.

They gathered with the Blake family and relatives about the table. A mound of waxy pink roses lay at the center of damask and crystal and the frail, beautiful flowers trailed across the board to each place. There were dozens and dozens of them; Ione couldn't help thinking how expensive they must have been as she tried to keep from shivering.

It was a brilliant and interesting hour. Still she felt she disgraced herself toward the end. It was when an aunt turned a sweet, high-bred smile upon her and asked if she had liked her work.

"Indeed, I loved it! I'd have kept on but Alan didn't wish me to."

There was a shocked silence; the aunt stared. Then Mother Blake began to talk of something else, hurriedly. Alan's face was red.

Ione felt a stinging resentment. What a way to look at honest toil! Too proud to work, the women of this family would be, every one of them. Yet not too proud to double their fingers under and pretend they were not blue with cold. Not too proud to hide a hole in the carpet!

No wonder Alan had superficial ideas. Father Blake was boasting this minute that he never had washed a dish in his life. Why, her own Tom did the dishes often and always when Janey was ill.

She liked her new relatives. But she was glad when the middle of the week came and Alan was driving her back to the city.

CHAPTER XXX.

ALAN had been living in a little, inexpensive hotel half way uptown. He took his wife there now and they settled, none too comfortably, in a tiny room.

But it was only for a day or two; the very next morning they went out to look for a home.

He was all for searching through the Seventies and Eighties; he didn't like subway travel, he said; besides they didn't want to get too far from the theaters and such.

He had spread the "For Rent" pages of the morning newspapers on the bed and was poring over them, head bowed. Ione went to him, laughing, and slipped her arms around his neck, putting her cheek against his hair.

"What do you mean, 'theaters,' Mister Lan? Don't you know we'll have no butterfly flittings here and there for a long, long time? A nice, fast ride on the subway'll do you good now and anon. And don't forget that forty a week isn't going to buy much glory."

"Well—what do you say then?" He pulled her down on his lap, looking at her in a worried way. "Honestly, I was only thinking of you, Io. Don't want you to get stuck away somewhere outside of everything."

"As if I cared! Want to hear something?" Pressing her lips to his ear, she whispered, "I love you!"

"Sweetheart kid!"

"I do, Lammy. I mean anywhere we go I'll be loving you. Any place you are I'll like. Look, dear, there's one advertised in the Bronx. Fifty dollars. Could we pay that?"

"Oh, Lordy, what could we get for fifty dollars?"

"It would leave a hundred and ten a month for other expenses. Well—"

ONCE in a while there comes into every girl's life a feeling of discontent, discouragement and downheartedness. At such a time her work becomes burdensome, dull, monotonous. She can't keep her mind on her work for any length of time. There is only one remedy for her. She begins to day-dream and her fanciful imagination soars to infinite heights. Her office is in the tower of a high skyscraper and by just looking out of the window she seems to be perched amid the clouds. Suddenly a whirring sound disturbs the atmosphere and out of the sky comes a huge bird-like plane. She lets her imagination run riot and sees herself lifted into the plane by the handsome aviator who has come to save her from her drudgery.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife" By Adele Garrison

Madge and Lillian Examine the Pendant

KATIE'S excited query as to what Miss Lincoln would think when she missed the chain with its secret pendant brought me to a realization that I must lose no time in examining the costly bauble with its astonishing miniature. But I took a few seconds to answer her question. From experience I knew that the best way of keeping my little maid's garrulous tongue in check was to make her feel that she shared a secret understanding with me.

"I don't think she ever will know it is gone, Katie," I said, "unless you or I tell her. Before I left the Larches, the physician gave her an opiate and she probably will not awaken for hours. You see, she never would have lost it except for the unusual coolness of this morning. Usually in this Summer weather she wears no scarf and always keeps her hand near the chain to make sure of its safety. But this morning she had her scarf tightly wrapped around her neck and her motor coat on when she came in, and she kept them there while Jim was lighting a fire. Then you came in with the telephone message about her aunt dying, and I saw her catch at her throat as if she were choking. In all probability she snapped the chain then without noticing it in her excitement. As soon as I have examined this very closely I shall take it over to her room and slip it into her clothing. Mrs. Ticer and I had to put her into bed with her coat and dress on—she was too chilled and exhausted to undress—so I am sure she will never suspect. Now will you please ask Mrs. Underwood to come to my room? Make some excuse, so that no one guesses what you are asking her. I am going directly there now."

"I tell her right avay queeck," Katie said, hurrying through the door and three minutes later I was locking my door after Lillian's entrance.

"Eleanor Lincoln dropped that chain and pendant this morning," I began abruptly. "I'm sure she had not missed them when the physician sent her off to sleep with an opiate—she probably won't awaken for hours—so we have plenty of time to examine the thing and get it back into her clothing before she wakens."

I felt a sneaking kinship with my melodramatic little maid as I held back a revelation of the miniature I had discovered until we were seated at opposite sides of a small table with the chain and the double pendant laid out between us.

"My sainted aunt!" Lillian ejaculated as her eyes rested on the costly case which her young neighbor of The Larches so sedulously had concealed. "So there was a secret pendant after all! Just look at that thing! Why! it's worth a king's ransom. No wonder she was nervous about it. Her life wouldn't be worth a sixpence if certain underworld gentry knew about that bauble and figured killing her was the only way to get it."

"Look at the inside of it," I said, trying to keep my voice calm. But I was miserably conscious that my request ended in a nervous squeak as I pressed the spring and displayed the miniature.

Characteristically, Lillian made no comment upon my disclosure for fully half a minute, although she had been volubly ejaculatory at the costliness of the case enclosing the startling picture. She took the miniature in her hand and scanned it closely. Then she laid it down and looked at me gravely.

"So little Mrs. Townsend was on the right track after all," she commented quietly.

My memory flashed back to the day when little Mrs. Townsend, of the Southampton summer colony, had brought me the photograph taken from a famous painting in a European gallery which had borne so striking a resemblance to Eleanor Lincoln and the dog Fedor, and which we had guessed was the explanation of the girl's reluctance to have Dicky make drawings of her in a similar pose with the beautiful wolfhound. We had managed to sidetrack Mrs. Townsend's curious conjectures, but I knew that the puzzle the picture presented had remained in Lillian's mind as in mine.

"Then you agree with me," I queried, "that Eleanor Lincoln is really the—"

Lillian put up a warning hand. "Don't speak that name yet, even to me," she warned.

HOW TO KEEP WELL by Royal S. Copeland M.D. U.S. Senator from New York

Full Eight Hours in Bed About Enough

WHAT would you think of a trans-continental railroad which undertook to drive a train across North America without changing engines? If you had plenty of time it might be done, but I venture to say it would require two or three weeks to make the trip. One time I crossed from Chicago to the Pacific Coast and, if I remember correctly, we changed engines 24 times. There was a strike on the road and the engines were in bad condition. A few hours would put the imperfectly repaired machine out of business.

DR. COPELAND

There must be intervals for cooling off, for oiling and the making of minor repairs. Without them, the engine becomes so seriously out of order that it cannot proceed at all.

These intervals in the use of a machine compare with the periods of rest and sleep required in the life of a living machine. Without the restoration and repair accomplished by these restful periods, there could be no continued activity on the part of the strongest of men and women.

The nervous system is a delicate and complicated mechanism. It is far more sensitive, more liable to get out of order, and more susceptible to serious disturbance than any machine made by man. It should be as well treated, certainly, as a railroad locomotive.

For myself I know that I must have sleep. I can get along without food, but without abundant sleep my work becomes unsatisfactory to me. Of course, I can speak for nobody else, but for me I know I must have plenty of sleep if I am to do my best work.

Just how many hours of sleep you need depends on your particular make-up. Napoleon got along with five hours or less, but most of us require much more. The average grown person needs about eight hours. Children must have more.

The sleeping room should be dark, quiet, cool, and well aired. The bed covering should be just enough to furnish comfort. If it is too heavy the sleep is restless and unrefreshing.

"Change of work is rest," is an old saying and a true one. Make it a point to get some recreation and a change from your usual duties. The tired part of your nervous system is being rested when you are using some other portion of it.

Sleep and rest are essential to your happiness. You cannot be successful in your undertakings and safe from the invasion of disease if you neglect them.

Answers to Health Queries

R. B. F. Q.—Would a sharp pain in the arm and around the heart, accompanied by a feeling of weakness indicate anything serious?

A.—May be due to a heart condition or to neuritis, due to some infection in the system. Have your heart examined first of all and then definite treatment can be advised.

J. V. Q.—What do you advise for stuttering? My little son 4 years old stutters very badly.

2. What should I do when I notice myself taking cold?

A.—Try to make the little fellow talk slowly and do not excite him. This is a nervous condition and by careful training he will probably outgrow it. If in a few years he has not improved it might be wise to consult the local board of education for information concerning classes for speech defect.

2. Consult a physician.

* * *

J. J. C. Q.—Would 5 feet 8 inches tall be considered a good height for a young man of 18 years of age? What should he weigh?

A.—Yes. He should weigh about 142 pounds.

* * *

P. S. Q.—What can I do to increase the growth of my eyelashes?

A.—Apply 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment to the lids before retiring.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Saturday, August 25

ACCORDING to the fortunate positions of the major planets, this day should be one of notable progress and achievements, especially in all that pertains to writings, publishing and in connection with close corporations, combines and secret organizations or in any contact calling for insight, strategy or tact. New projects and fresh contracts are under fortunate sway for success, but be on guard against prodigality or extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of enterprise and progress, with new contracts or understandings with secret orders or close corporations, or in all pertaining to writings, but it would be well to see that the finances are fully protected.

A child born on this day may be talented and enterprising, with many gifts making for success and positions of trust, but it would be well to inculcate the virtues of thrift and frugality.

Yet in thy thriving still misdoubt some evil, lest gaining on thee and make thee dim to all things else.—HERBERT.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN by HELEN ROWLAND

WOMEN—AND OTHER WOMEN

A WOMAN always feels a little relieved when her husband complains of his new stenographer's stupidity; yet some awfully brilliant men have been known to overlook a little thing like a one-horse-power mentality when gazing into a pair of sixty-horse-power eyes.

* * *

Monday morning at a Summer resort is the deadliest hour in a young girl's life—and the most sublimely peaceful in the average married woman's.

* * *

A girl gets a perspective on a man, when she goes away for the Summer, which may lend him a brand new "enchantment" or may reduce him to a "fade-out."

* * *

All those aesthetic men who are going in for arty bathing suits and pink and blue underwear might just as well know at the start that we women have tried all that, and it doesn't seem to have the least bit of effect on the amount of "IT" you possess.

HELEN ROWLAND

The safest kind of girl to marry is one who gets as big a thrill out of turning out a perfect layer-cake as the other kind would get out of flying across the Atlantic Ocean or swimming the Channel.

* * *

A man's idea of "a good wife" is one who will hold her husband's hat, while he loops a few loops and does a few tail-spins to work off his spirits—and then stand ready and waiting with the arnica and the headache powders when he's THROUGH.

* * *

"The world," sighs Paul Poiret, "used to wait breathlessly to see what the elegant woman would wear next!" But cheer up. It now waits just as breathlessly to see what she will take off next!

Fay King Paints Understanding Picture of Modern Mother-in-Law

MY DAUGHTER IS LUCKY TO HAVE YOUR SON, HE'S A FINE BOY!
YOUR DAUGHTER IS JUST THE WIFE I HOPED HE WOULD FIND!
YOUR MOTHER IS A DARLING!
NOT ANY SWEETER THAN YOURS IS!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

THE mother-in-law joke is as dead as a door nail!

It never gets a laugh any more, even if some ancient wheezer tries to spring it!

Mother-in-law is no longer set aside in a chamber of horrors and looked upon as a trouble maker and antagonizer!

Young married people speak affectionately of each other's mother.

The mother of each is only too happy to acknowledge the worth and good qualities of the newcomer into the family circle.

They also remind their own children that they, too, have faults when at times they run to the maternal arms and complain of their mate.

Modern mothers-in-law keep up with the children. They do not try to rule them.

WIFE THREATENED POISON; HUSBAND CHARGES IN SUIT

His wife threatened to poison his food, Henry W. Reichle, 2310 Walton avenue, Overbrook, charges in a bill of particulars in his divorce suit filed in Common Pleas Court against Mrs. Ethel M. Reichle.

The libellant who makes 28 accusations, claims that in March of 1926 his wife tried to stab him with a butcher knife, "just out of pure hatred and cussedness." He claims he was also told by a member of a fraternal organization that if his wife "did not keep her mouth shut" that he would likely be ejected from the organization.

Reichle asserts that he had to give up baseball and the study of radio to satisfy his wife. Reichle added that he had to get his own breakfast. He also avers that on one occasion when his father helped to paint their home, his wife became so abusive that he quit the job.

Pittsburgh Lady Says Ten Herbs Did World of Good; Calls It Wonderful Medicine.

"Ten Herbs has done my daughter and me a world of good," was the recent statement of Mrs. Harry Skiles, 135 Arnold Street, Crafton Heights, Pittsburgh, to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main

MRS. HARRY SKILES

Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this great natural medicine. "I had a severe case of indigestion," Mrs. Skiles continued. "I had to be careful what I ate—certain food I could not eat at all. At times there was a terrible bloated feeling, and I was also troubled with sourness and heartburn. My daughter's trouble was similar to mine, and she would have severe pains around her heart. I suffered with bilious attacks, headaches and dizzy spells, and there were times when everything would turn black. I was very nervous, especially at night, and did not sleep well. There were such terrible pains across my back at times that I could not bend over. I was a constant user of physics on account of constipation.

"After reading in the newspapers about so many local people being benefited by Ten Herbs, I decided to give your medicine a trial, never thinking I would get such great results in so short a time. I have been relieved of indigestion, and can eat almost anything without distress. My appetite has been improved, and sourness, bloated feeling and heartburn are gone. I am free of bilious attacks, headaches, dizzy spells and blurring of the eyes. My nerves are much stronger, and I sleep soundly. The pains are gone from across my back, and I no longer have to take physics. My daughter has been relieved of indigestion and pains around her heart. Ten Herbs has done us both so much good that we gladly endorse it to the public."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine.

Flagman Drops Off Train to Save Child

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Quick thinking and quicker acting enabled F. T. Calhoun, a flagman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, to snatch a 2-year-old child from death beneath a train at the Billmyer stone quarries near Marietta.

Calhoun's freight train was traveling about 25 miles an hour when he saw the child sitting between the rails of the eastbound tracks, on which another freight was approaching. He leaped from his train and lifted the child to safety as the eastbound freight passed.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

A GLITTERING "revue" of popular melodists in vocal and instrumental novelties will be tonight's offering of the National Broadcasting and Concert Bureau. The program will go on the air over the NBC System, including WCAE, at 10 o'clock. It will present Walter O'Keefe as master of ceremonies; Harold "Scrappy" Lambert, of Smith Brothers and "Time to Retire" fame; Harry Reser, chief of the Clicquot Eskimos; Gladys Rice, Roxy soloist; Mildred Hunt, crooner; Andy Sanella, saxophone virtuoso; the National Choristers, and the Mediterraneans orchestra, under the direction of Hugo Mariani.

Quaint, charming aids of the Seventeenth Century will be presented by Milady's Musicians over KDKA at 8 o'clock. The age of the minuet, with its delicacy, its courtly graces, periwigs and satin waistcoats, will be reproduced for listeners by Hans Barth, harpsichordist; Muriel Wilson, soprano, and an orchestra. A minuet by Boccherini, and another in G by Beethoven, will be orchestral selections. Mr. Barth will play as a harpsichord solo Mattheson's "Jig," while Miss Wilson has chosen to present "Heidenroslein," by Schubert; "Love Me Little, Love Me Long," a typical song of the age, and the old English air, "Shepherd! Thy Demeanor Vary."

Their vacation over, the Cities Service Cavaliers are back with a collection of new popular numbers for the Cities Service Hour, to be broadcast over WCAE at 8 o'clock. During the 60-minute program the Cavaliers will come before the microphone with four groups of songs, three of which will be popular numbers of today, especially arranged for the pleasing voices of this popular male quartet. Beginning with this program the Cavaliers will present a member of their quartet each week in a solo. Tonight, Leo O'Rourke, first tenor and manager, will sing "In My Bouquet of Memories." In addition to selections by Saint-Saens, Balfe, Cadman and gems from Rudolf Friml's musical show, "Sometime," the Cities Service Orchestra will offer a little novelty by Orth, called "In a Clock Store," which interprets the spirit of a quaint little shop where all sizes and sorts of timepieces are found.

A novelty trio will be a feature of the Wrigley review to be heard through KDKA at 8 o'clock. "The Faded Knot of Blue," and a song by Crumit, "I'll Meet Her When the Sun Goes Down," will be the offerings of the trio. Many vocal and instrumental soloists will be heard. An orchestra will play such numbers as "Mother Goose Parade," Grieg's "Wedding Day at Troldhaugen," "The Wooden Soldier," a waltz from the ballet "Sylvia," by Delibes, and "Fashionette."

A cowboy song, "Whoopie-Ti-Yi-Yo," will be sung by vocalists of the Stromberg-Carlson group during the program over KDKA at 10:00 o'clock. The singers, Milton J. Cross, first tenor; Maurice Tyler, second tenor; Walter Preston, baritone, and Marley R. Sherris, bass, also will present "Swinging Vine," by Grosvenor; "Long, Long Ago," "Pale in the Amber West" and Keith McLeod will play Irving Berlin's "Remember" as a vibraphone solo, and Godfrey Ludlow, violinist, will play "Plantation Melody," composed by himself and Mr. McLeod.

TUNES OF 1921 IN KDKA BROADCASTS

During the year 1921 several popular tunes were composed, which remain just as popular today as then. The Automatic Agitators quartet has chosen a number of these selections and formed them into a medley, which they will present for the first selection on their program over KDKA tonight at 10:30. Other selections will be "Dean You Cry Mah Baby," "A Kiss in the Dark," "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," "Are You Lonesome Tonight" and "Daisy Days."

HOOVER'S BOOSTERS HOLD RALLY TONIGHT

An open meeting of the Hoover-Curtis boosters committee, organized Monday night, will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight on the fifth floor of the Union Bank Building, Fourth avenue and Wood street. The organization aims to get all the voters in the county to register and cast their ballots in the presidential election. C. C. Hamilton is temporary chairman of the committee.

Your Sunday Dinner

By PRUDENCE PENNY

Roast Lamb with Brown Potatoes
Mint Sauce.
Spinach. Green Corn.
Cole Slaw and Pineapple Salad.
Peach Mousse.

REMOVE the skin from a leg of lamb, but do not remove any of the fat. Put half a cup of drippings in the bottom of the baking pan and place the meat on a trit in the pan. Sprinkle with salt and bake in a hot oven for two hours and a half. One hour before serving, place peeled raw potatoes about the meat. Baste the meat and potatoes frequently during the cooking, with the fat in the pan.

To 2 tablespoonsful of water add sufficient vinegar to make half a cup. Heat and dissolve 1 tablespoonful of sugar in it. Add ¼ cup of bruised mint leaves and stand over hot water to steep.

Wash spinach through several waters, then in a covered pot cook in just the water which clings to the leaves. Cook until wilted, then chop and serve with butter and pepper and salt.

Put corn in boiling water to cover and cook for 10 minutes. If you like it sweet, you may add a tablespoonful of sugar to the boiling water, but do not add salt, as it toughens it.

To one cup of chopped cabbage, add one chopped green pepper and one pimento. Marinate in a dressing made of one-half cup of vinegar and one-quarter cup of olive oil seasoned with salt, pepper, and celery salt. Put slices of pineapple on beds of lettuce, place a mound of slaw in each pineapple slice and garnish with a spoonful of mayonnaise and a stuffed olive.

Whip one pint of rich cream stiff. Add one cup of chopped peaches, sprinkled with one-half cup of sugar and drained of juice just before add-

ROBINSON TALK ON RADIO

Hot Springs, Ark., long famous as a winter resort for the wealthy, will assume a new significance in the national scheme of things, next Thursday night. At that time words spoken in Hot Springs by Senator Joseph Robinson, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, will be heard in every part of the nation and probably around the world. Formal notification ceremonies for Senator Robinson will be bradcast over an extensive network. The broadcast will begin at 10:30 p. m. Eastern daylight saving time, and will last one hour.

More than 20,000 Democrats and persons interested in the Arkansas candidate are expected to gather in front of the Arlington Hotel in Hot Springs, where the notification ceremony will be held.

Claude Bowers, New York newspaper man, who made himself nationally famous through his keynote speech at the Democratic National convention in Houston, will be on the air. He has been selected to make the notification speech.

John E. Martineau, governor of Arkansas, will deliver the address of welcome and John J. Raskob, chairman of the National Democratic committee, will preside at the ceremonies.

Senator Robinson made his debut as a national radio speaker when he served as permanent chairman of the Houston convention. His speech accepting the vice-presidential nomination will be his first public address since his nomination.

The Pittsburgh station, WJAS, will be in the hookup.

MINSTREL ACT FOR AIR

Modern minstrelsy, with a liberal sprinkling of old-time melodies, made famous by Rice, Primrose, Honey Boy Evans and Lew Dockstader, will appear before the microphone in a new series of programs, the Dutch Masters Minstrels, the first of which will be heard through the NBC System September 4, at 9:30 o'clock, eastern daylight saving time.

Percy Hemus, Steve Porter and Al Bernard, all well known as minstrels and comedians, will be starred in the radio minstrel shows, and will be supported by soloists, a male quartet, and an orchestra, directed by Hugo Marisni, specialist in intriguing rhythms and unique arrangements. Guest soloists who will appear in the Dutch Masters programs and members of the regular cast will be featured in new specialties each week.

KDKA will be in the hookup.

ORPHANS COURT HONORS DEAD LAWYER'S MEMORY

When Orphans Court adjourned yesterday it did so out of respect to the memory of Attorney Archibald D. Wilkin who died Wednesday. The motion to so honor the deceased member of the bar was made by Attorney William G. Negley.

Menu for Sunday's Dinner

By PRUDENCE PENNY

ing. Mix well and add one teaspoonful of vanilla. Pack in a mold cover with ice and salt and let freeze three hours.

ORANGE SAUCE — Four egg yolks, six tablespoons water, one cup orange juice, grated rind of one orange, one-quarter cup sugar and one tablespoon Blue Ribbon Malt Extract, (plain.) Beat the yolks very lightly. Add the water. Add Blue Ribbon Malt Extract. Add sugar, orange juice and rind. Cook in a double boiler until thickened. Serve hot on puddings.

CUCUMBERS, while they furnish very little nourishment, are cooling and because of their pleasant flavor, a welcome addition to the summer menu.

Cucumbers may be thinly sliced and served raw in salads in combination with other vegetables, or by themselves. The Germans serve them with a sour cream dressing or with a vinegar and thinly sliced onion.

There was an old-fashioned idea that cucumbers were poisonous and salt was sprinkled on them to draw the poison. Salting them will spoil their crispness but makes them a little easier to digest; so take your choice of crispness or indigestion.

FRIED CUCUMBERS—Peel cucumbers and cut in half-inch slices. Dip in beaten egg seasoned with salt and pepper and then in fine breadcrumbs. Fry in deep fat until brown and serve.

* * *

CUCUMBER SAUCE—A delicious sauce to be served with meats or fish is the following. Dissolve a bouillon cube in a cup of boiling water. Peel and chop a cucumber and add to the bouillon. Stew gently until the cucumber is tender. Add one tablespoonful of butter and a dash of paprika and serve.

* * *

CUCUMBER CUPS — Cucumber cups make a pretty service for luncheons. Cut unpeeled cucumbers in sections two inches long. Stew them gently until tender in boiling water. Add salt five minutes before removing from the stove. Scoop out the centers and fill with creamed chicken, fish or sweetbreads.

* * *

BAKED CUCUMBERS — Butter a baking dish and fill with sliced cucumbers. Dot with butter and sprinkle lightly with salt and flour, between the layers. Dot the top with butter and sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Bake in the oven for 30 minutes.

* * *

CUCUMBERS ON TOAST—Cucumbers may be cut in quarters lengthwise and placed in a shallow pan, covered with water and stewed until tender. Serve on toast like asparagus. Thicken the water they were cooked in with flour blended with butter, season with salt and pepper and pour over cucumbers and toast.

TOMATOES are a most important article of food. They are high in vitamin content. Vitamins A, B and C being present. They are pleasant of flavor, refreshing and have a slightly laxative effect. If you need to bolster up a deep affection for tomatoes with good excuses, there they are. Aside from that they bring flavor to any dish you care to add them, they are good thirst quenchers to carry on picnics and a general boon to the housewife.

Tomatoes find their way to my table for at least one meal a day and they often come near to making the meal itself. Single dish meals are my ambition during the warm weather and tomatoes help me greatly in attaining that ambition.

CORN AND TOMATOES AU GRATIN — Chop one green pepper and one onion and saute in two tablespoonsful of butter. Peel six ripe tomatoes, slice and add to the pepper and onion. Cut one cup of corn from the cob. Fresh or left-over corn, either may be used. Season with salt and pepper to taste and a little celery salt will do no harm. Cook together about ten minutes. Turn into a greased baking dish, sprinkle generously with buttered breadcrumbs and grated cheese. Place in a hot oven until the crumbs are browned and serve.

SCALLOPED CABBAGE AND TOMATOES—Peel and slice six tomatoes and shave a small cabbage fine. Pack into a casserole a layer of cabbage and a layer of tomatoes, sprinkle with pepper and salt and little dots of butter or bacon drippings. Continue until the dish is heaping full, finishing with the tomatoes. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs and grated cheese and bake for 45 to 50 minutes until cabbage is tender. This dish shrinks; so choose a large receptacle and heap it full.

TOMATO SPAGHETTI CUPS — Break spaghetti into inch lengths and cook in boiling salted water for 10 minutes. Blend 1½ tablespoonsful of butter with 1½ tablespoonsful of flour and 1½ cups of milk. Add ½ cup of chopped or grated cheese and cook until smooth and thick. Season with ½ teaspoonful of salt, divide in half. Add the cooked spaghetti to one part.

Cut off the stem end of firm tomatoes and scoop out the centers. Fill with the creamed spaghetti, sprinkle with grated cheese and breadcrumbs. Add the tomato pulp to the remainder of the cream sauce. Place stuffed tomatoes in a baking dish and pour the sauce about them. Bake in the oven until the tomatoes are tender, 45 to 50 minutes.

IF you will keep plenty of grape juice and ginger ale in your refrigerator you will never be at a loss for a delicious drink. Just mix the two equal portions, pour over ice cubes and flavor with lemon or orange juice. A section of lemon or orange may be draped over the edge of the glass, if you want to be very festive.

Some people prefer to use twice as much ginger ale as grape juice. My suggestion is that you try it both ways and see which suits you best.

Sure they're cooling—delicious Kellogg's Corn Flakes!★ Cooling because they are so healthfully easy to digest. Extra inviting, too, served with fresh summer fruits. Tomorrow at breakfast eat a generous bowlful and see how fit you feel all day long!

Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES

★ Kellogg's are the original corn flakes. More than 11,000,000 people daily demand them. No imitations have ever equaled their wonder-flavor and crispness.

Serve for lunch and dinner as well as breakfast. For the kiddies' evening meal. Never tough-thick—but extra crisp. With milk or cream—with fruits or honey added.

Order at hotels, restaurants, cafeterias. On dining-cars. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Always oven-fresh!

THE TABLE SUGAR SUPREME!

JACK FROST
FRUIT POWDERED SUGAR

IT has a fine, even texture, runs smoothly, dissolves immediately. Cereals taste better when covered with it. Fruits have finer flavors.

Ask for it—by name. It is easily identified by the attractive blue box.

SANDLOT BASEBALL by TOM BIRKS

MANAGER ED HARVEY of the Beaver Falls Elks will send Red Whitmore against the St. John's City League nine on Sunday at Sullivan Field. Harvey feels that the showing of the City Leaguers in the last two games warrants his best battery, so Gene Gables and Whitmore will do their stuff. If the Strip team gets to Whitmore, Seiler will be used.

McGRADY is reported to have a hot pitcher lined up to even up matters with the Beaver Falls boys. Harvey's team copped the last contest, which was abbreviated by a heavy rainstorm. This time it is possible that a pitcher fully capable of taking the Elks' measure will be sent to the mound to stop that heavy-hitting aggregation from down the river. And there is plenty of hitting power in the lineup.

OLLIE CARNEGIE, Heinie Boll, Goldberg, Kestner, Fritz, Gables, Scharcher and Johnny Pearson will give any pitcher plenty of trouble, and that's why Medrady is not going to let the visitors get away with anything soft.

And in view of the showing made against Canonsburg and Greensburg, both reputed strong teams, it is quite possible that Harvey will also have to trot out a pitcher when the Strip outfit start to hit that ball.

SOME scorekeepers have a funny way of keeping score. Anything that puts a runner on the sacks creates a hit in their opinion. And whether they stop to feel that this is an injustice to pitchers cannot be told. One team in the City League showed an official score of 16 hits. Not a single scorekeeper tallied the game that way.

But on the other hand the infielders wobbled about six times where hits were credited. Of course it does not make any difference in the winning or the losing of the game, but it makes the pitcher take all the blame when it should be shifted onto the shoulders of the other members of the club.

SOME of the old-timers in the district feel that they still have a game in their system. Under the managerial arm of Tom Griffiths the old-timers will meet Reliance Life at Olympia Park on Friday evening. In the old-timers' lineup will be Carl Poke, Heinsius, Julie Orris, late of Kansas City; McDonough, who once wore the uniform of the Boston Americans; Bob Griffiths, of Erie; Sam Griffith, of Cleveland; Red Ainsworth and quite a few other notables.

ON Saturday evening Reliance Life will play Book Shoe in a City League game at Crafton Church League grounds. The game will be called at 6 p. m. Manager Cochrane is looking for a game abroad Sunday. Call Atlantic 0626 or call Fairfax 4320.

MALLORY, JACOBS, CHAPIN ADVANCE

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, of Santa Monica, Cal., who renewed memories of her tennis supremacy of 24 years ago by winning the Eastern championship last week, was eliminated today in the third round of the national title tournament by Mr. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, of Boston, a veteran of almost as many years of play. Scores were 6-4, 11-9.

The match was an upset, as Mrs. Bundy, on her great record of this season, was favored and was among the eight seeded entrants. Mrs. Wightman, one of the greatest tacticians in the history of the women's game, won by wearing down her opponent with carefully placed shots which lacked the speed of Mrs. Bundy's drives but were the last word in accuracy.

MISS WILLS ADVANCES

Miss Helen Wills, the champion, scoring at 6-0, 6-2, over Mrs. L. A. Harper, of Los Angeles, found herself pitted against Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin, of Springfield, Mass., next. Mrs. Chapin downed Miss Clara L. Zinke, of Cincinnati, 6-2, 9-7.

Mrs. Wightman, also in the upper half of the draw, qualified to meet Miss Edith Cross, of San Francisco, who came through in straight sets, 7-5, 6-0, at the expense of Mrs. R. F. Stenz, of New York. Mrs. Wightman is the only unseeded player remaining in the tournament.

In the lower half of the draw Mrs. Molla Mallory continued her advance by taking the measure of Miss Virginia Hilleary, of Philadelphia, 6-3, 6-1, and next meets Miss Marjorie Morrill, of Dedham, Mass., who defeated Mrs. William Endicott, of Boston, in impressive fashion, 6-0, 6-3.

Miss Helen Jacobs, of Santa Barbara, winning by default of Mrs. Lillian Sherman Hester, of New York, found Miss Penelope Anderson, of Richmond, Va., her next opponent, the Southern girl having downed Miss Elsa R. Taubele, of New York, 6-1, 6-2.

HELEN EXTENDED

The Wills-Harper match lasted just 24 minutes, two minutes more than that in which Miss Wills opened defense of her title on Tuesday, but it was considerably harder fought. Showing none of the nervousness which usually handicaps those who face the young California champion of three nations, Mrs. Harper, a slim, dark haired, stockingless young woman with a flaming red bandeau, gave Helen stroke for stroke. No less than seven games she was able to force to deuce.

At the opening of the second set Mrs. Harper performed the unusual feat of breaking through Miss Wills' service at love and in the third game she again pierced the champion's delivery, this time with loss of only one point. It was the last game she could win, however, although the next two games were pushed to deuce.

Homestead to Fete Olympic Stars

Homestead citizens and its civic organizations will pay tribute tonight to two of its contributions to the United States Olympic swimming team.

Misses Josephine McKim and Susan Laird, two members of the Homestead Library team, who made the trip abroad with Uncle Sam's athletes, have returned from New York City and will be honored tonight at a public celebration to be held in West Field, Homestead.

The Chamber of Commerce and Kiwanis Club are taking an active part in tonight's affair. Men prominent in civic life will be among the speakers.

Besides paying tribute to the two Olympic stars, other members of the Homestead Library team will be honored. The affair promises to be one of the best of its kind ever staged in Homestead.

GIRL BREAKS RECORD BUT LOSES SWIM RACE

SOUTHPORT, Eng., Aug. 24.—Miss M. J. Cooper, of the Mermaid Swimming Club, London, had the unusual experience of breaking the world record for the women's 150-yard back stroke—yet losing the race. She swam the event in 1 minute, 5s seconds in the women's amateur swimming championships here, but was beaten by Miss E. Kinz, of the Zenith Swimming Club, Edinburgh, who set a world record with the time of 1 minute, 47.5 seconds.

Zachary Signed By Yankees; Covey Goes

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The signing of Tom Zachary, veteran southpaw, by the New York Yankees cost another veteran his job. Stanley Coveleskie, 37-year-old righthander, has been given his unconditional release by Miller Huggins.

Zachary came to the Yankees yesterday by the waiver route. He had won six games and lost nine for the Washington Senators this year, but Huggins believes he is the man needed to carry the Yankees down the home stretch in the present pennant drive.

"I intend to use Zachary as a starting pitcher," said Huggins.

Coveleskie was purchased as a free agent by the Yankees this spring after Washington had released him when he developed a sore arm. He never has been able to recover his best form.

BEST IN PIT... FRIDAY, AUGUST 24, 1928 SEVENTEEN

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Bucs' Come-Back in Second Game Against Giants Consoles Fans for Loss of First. Booing of Bush for Fancied Mistakes Unjust—Records Show No Parallel for Bob Groves' Feat.

THOUGH the failure of Carmen Hill and the Pirates to win the first game of the big series with the Giants after having it seemingly safe was a keen disappointment to the local season's record crowd of 32,000 fans, the manner in which Donie Bush's fighters came back behind Fred Fussell's good pitching and crushed the McGrawites in the second encounter, knocking them out of first place, brought a heap of consolation.

Fred Fussell.

It not only gave the Bucs an even break in the double-header—and a split in a bargain card with the New Yorkers in their present form is distinctly creditable—but it proved that the Bushmen have all the fight and gameness necessary to enable them to make the most of whatever pennant chance may be said to exist for them during the remainder of the sultry race.

THE thing to do now is to go after the two other games in the series today and tomorrow with redoubled determination. If the Pirates can get away with those two contests, and thus make it three out of four, tomorrow night will find them real contenders in the flag chase.

Beating the Giants in the remaining two games is likely to prove a man's size job, it must be admitted, yet the Bucs took three in a row after losing the first game when the Gothamites were here early in July. And this time, the locals appear to have the better of the pitching situation, with Grimes and Kremer to oppose Genewich and Fitzsimmons.

CHARGED with the only Pirate fielding error of the afternoon, George Grantham made up for it with some hard and timely hitting. His triple gave the Bucs two of their three runs in the first game, and in the second he led the Pittsburgh attack with a home run, a double and a single.

George Grantham.

Sparky Adams and Dick Bartell also continued to be brilliantly active in the Buccaneer cause. On the defensive, Adams added two more games to his long string of errorless performances. He has now played 23 straight games without a misplay, accepting in all 153 chances.

HAPPILY, the small percentage of Forbes Field patrons given to booing Manager Bush when their fancied superior knowledge of baseball leads them to believe that he is making mistakes, cannot be said to be representative of Pittsburgh's real fans, who are among the fairest, most sportsmanlike and best posted in the country. Bush's percentage of mistakes is as small as that of any other manager in baseball, and on the great majority of occasions when he is compelled to endure an unjust and uncalled for booing his judgment is correct, or there is an inside explanation that would show he is not to blame for something that goes wrong.

THAT this is realized by the fair-minded fans who are not second guessers was shown yesterday, when loud applause for the hustling little skipper drowned a chorus of boos that had been unjustly aimed at him.

Booing the man whose leadership is largely responsible for the Pirates' drive, in which they have won 33 of their last 46 games, is no way to help the Bucs in their efforts to bring another pennant to Pittsburgh.

NO INCENTIVE other than the best interests of his club is required to make Burleigh Grimes work his head off when he goes to the hill for the Corsairs, but he has a personal goal to strive for in today's game with the Giants.

For the contract of regaining the leadership of the major leagues in number of games won this season again confronts Burleigh, Larry Benton having pulled up to a tie with him when he was credited with the Giants' victory in the first half of yesterday's twin bill. Each has won 21 games.

GRIMES will have a perfect record of five straight wins in the same number of starts against the Giants for 1928 if he can come through again this afternoon, and hang up his twenty-second conquest of the campaign.

Twice on their own grounds and twice at Forbes Field Burleigh has spilled his team mates of 1927. In the four games he has given them a total of only 13 runs.

Dick Bartell

THE fates were kind to Benton in permitting him to leave Forbes Field yesterday with a victory—his seventh in a row—that put him in a deadlock with Grimes in the matter of total triumphs.

It isn't often that a pitcher who has been withdrawn from a

THE National League would be in a bad way this year if it had no Giants nor McGraw to supply a "kick." The Cardinals, Reds or Cubs could come to Pittsburgh under the same conditions as yesterday and the crowd hardly would reach 32,000, especially in an off season.

McGraw will not tolerate an athlete who does not always give his best, and he would prefer to call down a star rather than a novice for the same infraction of the rules or the unwritten code regarding "hustle."

ROSS YOUNG was McGraw's ideal type of player. Young had just fair ability in some respects, but he was a champion under the Giant boss. Travis Jackson is another of the driving type, and Andy Reese and Melvin Ott appear to be of the same mould.

Fred Lindstrom is having a banner year. The place-hitting of McGraw's grand thirdsacker is one of the best touches in the play of the Giants. Whenever you see Freddie pull back his right foot you can expect a wallop down the rightfield line. He uncorked his feature numnber in the eighth inning of the first game, the drive against the wall having a lot to do with the New York success.

OTT walked after the excitement of Frank O'Doul's homer had settled down. Lindstrom deliberately hit to rightfield after putting the hit-and-run sign up. Only the fast fielding of Paul Waner, who plays the rightfield wall like Hoppe plays the cushions, prevented the winning run on the drive. The wallop would be a double on

INSPIRATION TO MATES

Captain Pie Traynor of the Pirates, the greatest third baseman in the majors, is playing the most brilliantly of any major leaguer at the present time. Since July 24 Captain Pie has participated in 30 gamas, and in only two of these games has he been turned back without a hit. In his last 129 times at bat, Traynor has gathered 13 doubles, six triples and 41 singles for the amazing batting average of .465. And Pie is speeding up! In 12 of his last 13 games he has garnered one or more hits in each game, and has slammed out 28 safe blows in 54 trips for an average of .518. Of the 28 hits, five were triples and five were doubles, and more than half of his hits were timely in that they were delivered when Pirate mates were on the bases. The work of Captain Traynor has been a great inspiration to his mates, and should the Pirates get "up there," Pie will be deserving of much of the credit.

CORBETT, BAKER TO FIGHT

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Young Corbett, who flashed into prominence a few days ago when he knocked out Nick Testo, of Troy, N. Y., in five rounds at San Francisco, has been matched for a battle against Sergeant Sammy Baker at Madison Square Garden September 13.

KATKISH GETS DRAW

MARIETTA, O., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Tona Laross, Cincinnati welterweight, and Jack Katkish, Pittsburgh, fought a 12-round match to a draw last night. Russ Heiha, Columbus heavyweight, beat Harry Miller, McKeesport, Pa., the referee stopping the bout in the third round, saving Miller from a knockout.

Capt. Harold (Pie) Traynor, third baseman of the Pirates, has set up a new record for sacrifice flies. He has advanced runners by sending long drives to opposing outfielders on 22 occasions.

Novotny, Moller Even at Ninth

By FRANCIS E. HEALY,
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Frank Dolp, the young putting genius of Portland, Ore., had Chick Evans, veteran of the Chicago links, 2 down at the turn in the semi-finals of the Western amateur here today.

Gus Novotny, of Chicago, and Larry Moller, of Quincy, Ill., were all even at the same mark.

All four were playing wild and wooly golf. A high wind played havoc with high tee shots. Evans' second shot at the first hole rolled into a pit and he was out short, but Dolp was on in two and missed a two-foot putt to halve. Chick's 15-foot putt at the second rolled over the cup eight inches and Frank's followed suit. Dolp won the third when Chick hit a bunker. Frank missed a 60-foot putt by a fraction of an inch for a deuce at the fourth to halve. They evened the fifth. They halved the sixth and Chick won the seventh.

Dolp went into the lead again on the eighth with a fine iron shot while Chick was examining traps. Frank stymied Chick at the ninth and the Chicago golfer conceded the hole, making Dolp 2 up.

BIG BILL ON TRIAL TODAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP).—"Big Bill" Tilden's trial for violating the amateur rule of the United States Lawn Tennis Association opens—and perhaps closes—today, but the lanky Philadelphian will not be there to defend himself in person. As a matter of fact, Tilden will not be represented at the trial.

Tilden's fate lies in the hands of the executive committee of the U. S. L. T. A., which meets to determine what punishment, if any, should be inflicted on the 1928 American Davis Cup captain for writing newspaper articles on the Wimbledon tournament in which he was a contestant.

As his defense Tilden sent a letter to Samuel H. Collom, president of the association, explaining that he would be prevented by business from appearing in person and disclaiming any intention of violating either the letter or the spirit of the amateur rule.

Tilden declared his articles at Wimbledon were of a "comment" nature and were in no sense designed to "cover" the tournament in the newspaper sense of the word.

The combined jury and judicial bench will consist of 30, including four officers, 13 sectional delegates, eight delegates at large and five former presidents of the association.

GEORGE LOTT IN FINAL

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 24.—(INS.)—George Lott, of Chicago, advanced to the final round of the twelfth annual Casino challenge when he defeated Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., 6-2, 9-7, 7-5, in a semi-final match. Lott was a member of the United States Davis Cup team which recently returned from Europe.

The New Jersey player was no match for the brilliant Lott in the first set and lost it, 6-2. The second and third sets found Mangin battling all the way and forcing the Chicagoan to his utmost, especially in the second set.

An Australian team, Jack Cummings and Gar Moon, advanced another notch in the doubles play by virtue of a win over William Aydelott, of New York, and Harris Coggeshall, of Des Moines. The set scores were 7-5, 8-6.

THREE GOLFERS TIE IN N. Y. STATE PLAY

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Playing on a water-soaked course through a drizzling rain, George Dawson, of Westchester-Biltmore, former Chicago golfer; Donald Carr, of Mount Kosco, N. Y., and John Ayling, of Syracuse, tied for first honors in the 18-hole qualifying round of the sixth annual New York state amateur golf championship. Each turned in 77 for the round to lead the field of 164 starters.

After going out in 42, Carr shot a brilliant 35, one under par, on the last nine holes to tie Dawson, who turned in the first low score. Carr had only one hole over par for the incoming nine.

The big surprise was the failure of George Voigt, of North Hills, holder of the Long Island amateur and open crowns and considered one of the strongest contenders, to finish among the 32 qualifiers.

BUCS HOPE TO GAIN EDGE IN SERIES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THE Pirates are still in the flag fight. If they can take the remaining two battles with the Giants there's no telling how far the Freebooters can go. For this afternoon the home team has a real slab ace to shoot at the New Yorkers, Donie Bush will take the blanket off Burleigh Grimes who will try to down his clubmates of last season and incidentally annex his twenty-second triumph of the season.

Perhaps the Giants today consider themselves lucky to have secured an even break in the holiday spectacle of yesterday. In the presence of 32,000 followers of the sport the Pirates knocked the Polo Grounders out of first place by winning the second struggle of the afternoon. The Bucs were leading in the opening fight as late as the eighth round, but Frank O'Doul planted a two-run homer into the rightfield stands after two were out in the inning, and before the foe could be retired he counted three more tallies and won the fight. The score was 6 to 3.

The Giants absorbed an awful lacing in the nightcap, the Oaklanders taking kindly to the offerings of three pitchers. As the twilight began to fall on the scene the last struggle ended with the Pirates owning a 13 to 3 triumph.

The Pirates probably will have to face Joe Genewich this afternoon in the third game of the series. Since leaving the Braves for the Giants, Joe has been transformed into a regular pitcher but he may need all his stuff and resourcefulness today, for Grimes is likely to be a tough hombre.

HILL FALTERS

Carmen Hill and Fred Fussell worked the two games for the Pirates yesterday. Up to the eighth Carmen of Corry had the Giants eating out of his hands. He had two erased in the eighth but with only four putouts needed the invaders rose in their fury to spoil the anticipated Pittsburgh success. Ott walked on top of O'Doul's round-tripper. Fred Lindstrom hit the rightfield wall with a single, Ott taking third. Lindstrom then swiped the middle bag and put up to Terry the important matter of driving in the runs. Memphis Bill tripled, scoring his two pals, and Jackson bunted safely for the sixth and last tally.

Larry Benton received credit for a victory that was a big surprise to the fair-haired star. When Benton left the fight in the eighth he was two runs in arrears but the late rally put over by his pals swayed the game to the New York dugout.

Jack Scott, reporting to McGraw yesterday morning, relieved Benton and a right good job of relief twirling was turned in by Jack. The veteran held the Pirates runless in the last two frames.

The best pitching of the afternoon was offered by Fred Fussell who held the Giants to six hits in the whole course of the second fight. The Wichita Falls southpaw, as usual, was in fine control of the ball, he walking only one batter.

Home runs by Grantham and L. Waner featured the Pittsburgh victory. Grantham's homer into the rightfield stands was the first run of this contest. Sprout came through with a three-run homer in the sixth with two out, his drive reaching the exit gate of right-center. The youngster's speed won him a close decision at the home plate.

Field Club Woman Victor

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

HITTING 'em far, wide and handsome, and finishing with a low gross of 86 for a net 77, Mrs. C. I. Wendt, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, won the first prize in the annual Western Pennsylvania Women's Golf Association 18-hole medal play handicap tournament over the eye-pleasing St. Clair course yesterday.

Mrs. Wendt was six strokes better than her nearest gross score opponent, Mrs. John Ellen, also of the Field Club, and her net 77 two strokes to the good over Mrs. F. M. Sloan, Edgewood; Mrs. Tem Gray, Ambridge, and Mrs. Kerschner of Stanton Heights, each of whom totaled 79.

The field was divided in three divisions. Players with 1 to 20 handicaps composed the first flight. Those with 21 to 31 were in the second and the ones having margins from 31 up were in the third.

Mrs. L. W. Gillette, a St. Clair player, turning in a net 89 won the second flight honors. In the third division, another home club woman, Mrs. E. W. Judy, was first.

Mrs. Wendt's play was brilliant, especially on the outgoing nine when she scored a 40. Coming home she lapsed somewhat and too a 46.

some fielders, but Paul held Fred on first and Melvin on third.

Lindstrom puts the same trick over repeatedly on the Polo Grounds, some of his drives reaching the shorter home-run zone. He makes a great running mate for the equally lanky Jackson, the two being quite a show. But when Glenn Wright and Traynor are performing at top speed there is no "left side" able to top them.

FRANK O'DOUL, the fine-fisted athlete who put the Giants in the first flash of yesterday, was the victim of an auto accident in the early season that deprived the Polo Grounders of the services of a slugger as well as something against what probably would have been a big season for Lefty.

Besides leading the Coast League in homers last year, Frank was the best baserunner in the circuit. His ailment of this season slowed him down for months; he was in the game often when he could not let himself out on the bases. The Coast League appears to have recovered from his accident, although he still is bothered a little.

JOHNNY CUMMINGS received a deserved ovation when he came to the plate. The North Side team is capable of catching regularly for a major-league team, but it was Johnny's fortune to run into the unusual condition that exists in the New York receiving department. Francis Hogan is rated as one of the game's best in his first year, and any club would like to have Bob O'Farrell.

LEGION NINES CLASH FOR TITLE TODAY

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The Browder and Hoskins team of Louisville, and the Titists of Worcester, Mass., came through their semi-final games of the American Legion junior baseball championship pete victorious and will meet today in the final game.

The Louisville team gained its final berth by beating the Panama champions, 15 to 2, in seven innings, while Worcester defeated Meridan, Mass., 4 to 1.

The Louisville team defeated Central Falls, R. I., and Meridan bested Wilmington, Del., in the opening contests Wednesday.

FORMBY, England, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Stewart Scheptal, New York youngster, won his way into the final round of the boys' amateur golf championship today by defeating J. P. Nichols, 2 up. The New York boy won his quarter final match this morning from William Currie, 5 and 3.

Miss Straub Nears Title

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., Aug. 24.—Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. star and Western Pennsylvania titleholder, will battle S. Jarvis Adams, Jr., former Pittsburgher and present Forest Hills veteran, for the net championship of Southern Pennsylvania on the Bedford Springs Hotel gallery court today. O'Loughlin crashed the final round by dint of a 6-2, 6-3 semi-final triumph over John Brown, Latrobe ace, while Adams attained the trophy bracket at the expense of Dave O'Loughlin, likewise a Winged Head star, whose unsteadiness after an eight weeks layoff helped account for a 6-2, 6-4 verdict against him.

John O'Loughlin, having passed through the quarter finals with 6-1, 6-2 decision over H. J. Roth, ex-Mercersburg Academy racqueteer, had smooth going against Brown. The latter had stroked through a protracted 6-2, 4-6, 10-8 quarter final engagement with his doubles partner, Sullivan, late in the morning and was quite fatigued after two hours of baseline dashing.

Adams almost cracked in his second set with Dave O'Loughlin, but rallied bravely with the tally 4-3 against himself to reel off three games for the match. Adams mixed hard drives to outstay his younger opponent.

Rose Straub, Johnstown girl, advanced to the woman's final by virtue of 7-5, 6-1 success over Mildred Miller, Altoona lass, and will defend her 1927 premiership against Mary McDonnell, of Fallen Timber, today. Miss Miller led Miss Straub at 5-1 in the first set, but succumbed before the accurate and relentless attack of her more experienced rival.

Miss McDonnell had a close call in her semi-final fray with little Elsie Jahns, of Westmont. Miss Jahns, conqueror yesterday of Ruth Lynn, Cumberland luminary and second seeded entrant, pushed to the net and grabbed off set two, but was unable to maintain the pace against the more seasoned Miss McDonnell who emerged on top, 7-5, 4-6, 6-0.

Brown and Sullivan were run vigorously to cop their initial round doubles tilt from the Central Pennsylvania pair, Notopoulos and Nicholson, 6-2, 7-5. The losers stepped to the front at 2-0 in the second one, and at 4-0 in stanza two, but faltered at inopportune moments to drop the tussle. Dave O'Loughlin and Jack Evans eased into two two-men sets finals, downing Rufus Cooper, Westmont satellite, and Jack Melvin, of Altoona, 6-3, 6-4.

The local event is scheduled to wind up today, but due to the large entry list and dearth of courts the extra day will be required. All final contests are carded for tomorrow.

The summaries:

SINGLES.

Round Two—H. V. Roth defeated John Larson, 6-4, 8-6.

Round Three—David O'Loughlin defeated J. A. Yon, 6-3, 6-3; J. R. Brown defeated P. G. Sullivan, 6-2, 4-6, 10-8; John O'Loughlin defeated H. J. Roth, 6-1, 6-2.

Semi-finals round—S. Jarvis Adams, Jr., defeated David O'Loughlin, 6-2, 6-4; John O'Loughlin defeated J. R. Brown, 6-2, 6-3.

WOMEN'S SINGLES.

Round Two—Mildred Miller defeated Evelyn Claybrook, 6-3, 6-4.

Semi-final round—Rose Straub defeated Mildred Miller, 7-5, 6-1; Mary McDonnell defeated Elsa Jahns, 7-5, 4-6, 6-0.

game with the score 3 to 1 against him, two men out and the bases empty in his club's half of the eighth inning, is credited with a victory in the end, but that was Benton's luck on this occasion.

IF the Giants had merely tied the score in the eighth and won out in the ninth, the decision would have gone to Jack Scott, but as Bill Terry's triple resulted in three additional runs and made the score 6 to 3 in New York's favor when Scott went in the victory had to be credited to Benton under the rules.

IF THERE is anything in major league baseball records to equal the feat that Bob Grove of the Athletics achieved yesterday when he struck out three successive Cleveland batters on nine pitches and five consecutive hitters on 17 deliveries, it is going to take the researchers a long time to find it. The record for consecutive strike outs in a major league game is eight, set by Charley Buffington of the Boston Nationals against Cleveland on September 2, 1884, but it is unlikely that any pitcher before Grove ever fanned five men in a row on 17 pitches.

Bob Grove

IF GROVE had been as successful against the Yankees this season as he has been against other clubs, the Mackmen would now be mighty close to leading the American League. The fireball southpaw has won 19 games and lost only six, and of his six defeats all but one were administered by New York.

Irish Give Tunney Rousing Welcome

DUBLIN, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Gene Tunney today was in the land of his ancestors and he was accorded a welcome greater than any king ever has received at the hands of the Irish.

Notwithstanding a typical Irish downpour, thousands of persons waited on the streets to welcome and cheer the ex-champion boxer.

When the steamer from Holyhead arrived at Kingstown nobody was permitted to land until the reception committee, which included John McCormack, the tenor; Maj. Fitzmaurice, trans-Atlantic flier, and Gen. O'Duffy, chief of police, had gone aboard to wish the visitor "gead mille failte"—a hundred thousand welcomes.

Gene landed amidst the strains rendered by a band of pipers, and entered one of a fleet of decorated motorcars displaying the Stars and Stripes and the Irish Tricolor.

Despite his expressed hope to be allowed to enter the city quietly, the people insisted upon their hero worship and Tunney's drive to Dublin was a triumphal procession with the greatest of excitement manifest everywhere. The car had to push its way through dense packs of cheering people to the Gresham Hotel, where the former champion is staying.

VISITS PRESIDENT

Hardly had Gene entered the hotel when he received an invitation from President Cosgrave to visit him at the government building. Tunney promptly responded and was received cordially by Mr. Cosgrave and his cabinet ministers. He then was presented to the council of the Tailteann Games teams, which gave a banquet in his honor. He will visit the games today and present prizes to the winners Saturday.

Interviewed upon his arrival at the hotel, Gene said: "I never before have had such a welcome. Look at those thousands out there in the rain. All they can hope for from me is a glance. They can't even hope for any conversation." He declared himself charmed with the appearance of the city, with its splendid buildings and pleasant homes.

President Cosgrave's reception delighted him, Tunney said. "He was very kind to me and gave me a great welcome," he said. "He is a perfect gentleman."

In a quiet moment at the end of the day the former boxer confided to friends that he would be "very glad when all this hero worship is over" and he is able to get back to a retired place to escape public notice. It is understood he intends to return to England Sunday, postponing his visit to Mayo, the birthplace of his parents, until his mother arrives in September.

RENA NELSON WINS WESTERN JUNIOR TITLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Playing in her first tournament, 15-year-old Rena Nelson of Chicago yesterday won the women's western junior golf champion by defeating the favorite June Beebe, of Chicago, 7 and 6 in the final 18-hole round at the South Shore Country Club.

The championship match was played over a sodden course on which nearly every stroke raised a spray of water, but the new champion turned in a good card. She won the first four holes before Miss Beebe could break the charm and was six up at the turn with a card of 41 as compared with her opponent's 47. She clinched the title by winning the tenth and eleventh in even par ad it was over whe the twelfth was halved with par fours.

PETROLLE BOUT TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Aug. 24—(INS.)—The Jack Berg-Billy Petrolle bout, scheduled for last night, was postponed until tonight on account of rain. The fighters weighed in yesterday, Petrolle tipping the beam at 134½, while the Englishman scaled exactly 134. A previous encounter between these rivals for a "shot" at Sammy Mandell's title was called a draw.

PENNSY MEET TOMORROW

Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, Columbus, Altoona, Johnstown, Akron, Canton and Pittsburgh district railroad employes will compete in the region championships of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Pitcairn tomorrow.

In addition to the track and field events, there will be baseball and trapshooting, tennis, quoits and horseshoe competition. The rifle championships will be decided at Johnstown, also being scheduled for tomorrow.

Victors in the meet will represent the Central Region in the annual Pennsylvania System championships at Altoona on September 22.

The Buffalo contingent, boasting such stars as the Johnson brothers, weight men, and McCullough, miler among the men entrants and Margaret Weber, Mary Tempset and Margaret Leary among the women, is somewhat of a pre-meet favorites.

Interest in the girls' 50 and 100-yard sprints, with Elizabeth Ersik and Vera Milcie competing for the Pittsburgh Division against picked stars from the other sections is one of the feature events.

Frank J. Shea, track coach at the University of Pittsburgh will referee the meet. The meet will be in charge of the Central Region Athletic Committee, consisting of W. M. Woolson, chairman; J. H. Baker, West Penn; H. E. Kreig, Buffalo; H. N. Tawney, Eastern Ohia; F. H. Breuhler, Lake Erie; R. S. Graffius, Pittsburgh General Office, and C. W. Croasmun, secretary.

TILDEN

United States Lawn Tennis Association, William T. Tilden, was serenely doing his "turn" at a new theater here in a skit called "A Night at the Tennis and Racquet Club."

His vaudeville engagement proved to be the "business" which he told the tennis association would prevent him from being present when his case was taken up at the New York meeting of that body.

The ranking No. 1 player of the American courts told newspapermen that he expected the Davis Cup would stay in France for some time, or until United States teams were conditioned by being sent abroad regularly to prepare themselves for competition on foreign courts.

Four of the six crack French net stars who have come to this country for the national doubles tourney at the Longwood Cricket Club in which several of them are to play will see Tilden in a new role tonight.

Cochet, Pierre Landry, Christian Boussus and Rene de Buzelet will be his guests at the local house.

Newspapermen gained the impression that Tilden held little hope of favorable action at the hands of the lawn tennis association. He told them he was booked for vaudeville next week and that he had been offered and was considering an extensive engagement.

ARMY SCRUBS FLUNK; MAY INJURE ELEVEN

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Academic deficiency among some of last year's plebes and scrub football team at the United States Military Academy has cut down Coach Biff Jones' list of "hopefuls" and makes his already difficult problem harder.

Gordon, a letterman on last year's "A" squad, was recently discharged for deficiency in mathematics. He played guard and did well, particularly in the Navy game. Plebes or freshman of last year who have been dropped from the rolls because of deficiency in studies are: Carver, a quarterback on the first plebe team; Wood and Ford, guards, and the following substitutes: Vickery, end; Treweek, back; Rothrock, guard; Kedziora, back, and Kreuz, end.

ELEMENTS BEAT SWIM STARS IN RECORD TRY

BALTIMORE, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—After having been in the water for five hours and 20 minutes, battling adverse winds, tide and choppy water, William F. Prindell, 16, and Wilmer Jones, 19, quit in their effort to set a new record for the swim across Chesapeake Bay from Tolcheyer to Bay Shore. The two youths, life guards at a local pool, were about eight miles from their goal when taken from the water.

The two entered the water yester morning and were caught in the tide which swept them down the bay.

Band Renders Wrong Song For Victor

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 24. — (INS.) — Lullawatt, owned by Walter Candler, sportsman and son of Asa Candler of Atlanta, captured the 2:15 trot during the Grand Circuit meeting here, but a misunderstanding in the bandstand slightly disrupted the ceremonies followin, it was disclosed today.

Walter Candler was presented with a trophy by Daniel B. Burnham, New York sportsman, after Lullawatt's victory. The band had been instructed to play "Dixie" as soon as the trophy was presented, but the band-master, forgetting the selection his music cue called for, hastily consulted his program, learned that Lullawatt was driven by Eagan and that the Candler colors were given, mistakenly, as green sulks. So the band played "The Wearing of the Green."

runs. A low throw by Lindstrom with two out opened the way to the festival.

Carl Hubbell, new southpaw of the Giant staff, started against Fussell, but he was yanked in the fifth in favor of Jim Faulkner. Johnny Cummings batted and singled for Faulkner in the seventh, the hit driving in a run. Chet Nichols, former Pirate, then stepped to the mound, but Chet was the victim of Lindstrom's low throw and the Pirates made their cluster of runs.

Vic Aldridge rescued Nichols in the seventh with two out and Vic pitched the next and last inning.

Men! make this shaving test

Try this double-dense lather that soothes, heals —gives quicker shaves —ends tenderface.

IF you want to end after-shave irritation—if you want to prevent all burning and smarting—if you want the quickest, smoothest, most satisfactory shave you've ever known—try Lifebuoy Shaving Cream!

This new kind of shaving cream removes the cause of most shaving irritation—friction, the rough scraping of razor over skin. The only way to end this friction is by complete lubrication.

Ordinary lather cannot lubricate the skin properly. It is too light and frothy. Lifebuoy Shaving Cream's penetrating, double-dense lather, however, hugs the face so closely that a thoroughly lubricated shaving surface is formed. You get a wonderfully clean shave—yet your razor scarcely seems to touch you.

Moreover, in Lifebuoy Shaving Cream you have the same protective ingredient that you get in Lifebuoy Health Soap. Its soothing, healing lather keeps skin clear, smooth, healthy.

Lifebuoy lather is also remarkable for its lasting qualities. Stays fresh and moist—doesn't dry on the face.

Compare Lifebuoy Shaving Cream with the cream you are now using. You'll see the difference—instantly. Get the big red tube today.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

Numerous Important Working Details Not Mentioned in Plan to Nationalize Coal Mines.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

ONE important point upon which the Hamilton and Wright "Way of Order for Bituminous Coal" is indefinite is the exact basis for the purchase of the coal properties. To eliminate the competitive feature and to make the plan workable it will be necessary for the proposed Federal Bituminous Coal Corporation to take over all of the coal properties, both developed and undeveloped, except the captive mines which will not engage in commercial business.

THIS means the buying of a tremendous amount of coal equipment which must be scrapped and acres of coal lands which may not be put in production during the present generation. It means the purchase of mines ranging from the most modern workings to isolated pits operated by three or four miners.

ON what basis are these properties to be valued? Must the owners be compelled to accept prices based on the present depressed condition of the industry? Shall the properties be bought on a basis of profits shown in the good years of the business? Is any allowance to be made for the going value of a well developed organization, or are they to be put in the same class with moribund operations only a step from bankruptcy?

IN buying the mines, the government created monopoly would have to respect the legitimate rights of the mine owners. From the other point of view, there is no reason why the owner of worthless mine properties should be subsidized. But between the good and the bad there is no definite line. No general rule of thumb can be made. Each mine offers a separate problem in valuation. Equipment, quality of coal, thickness of the seam, cost of production and advantages of location all must be considered.

IT would not be wise to push the government into another impossible problem of valuation such as that of the railroads. In that case, after spending millions of dollars and years of time, the task is still uncompleted and the valuation figures obtained are now too old to be of much practical use. The coal industry offers an equally involved problem.

WHEN the value of the coal industry is finally arrived at it must be one which has squeezed out the water. Too high a price would permanently saddle the company with excessive interest charges which would have to be passed on the consumer.

The legal problems involved in the proposed nationalization of the coal industry have no precedent. Years might be consumed in litigation before the future of the project could be assured.

THE problem of excess miners would not be solved. The authors of the plan admit this but state the organization could reduce labor in a more humane and less drastic manner than is being done at present. But years must pass before the plan would be working. Surplus miners are drifting into other industries day by day. By the time the organization will be in a position to consider this question there is good reason to believe that the surplus miners will have solved it themselves.

ANOTHER difficulty can be seen in the fact that the voting control of the corporation will be equally divided between labor and the consumers. The possibility of mutual agreements depends largely on the character of the directors but, obviously, the stage would be perfectly set for deadlocks. The labor representatives would seek only high wages and would block attempts to introduce modern machinery. The consumer representatives would be interested only in cheap coal. From the standpoint of self interest both sides would be right. This arrangement offers no contribution to peace.

THE coal industry, as now constituted, is slowly righting itself. It will never arrive at perfection. It is achieving better time, in a crude and brutal manner. It has meant hardship to many miners and bankruptcy for many operators, but it is getting better. There is reason to believe that it will be back on its feet before the Hamilton and Wright plan could be put into effect.

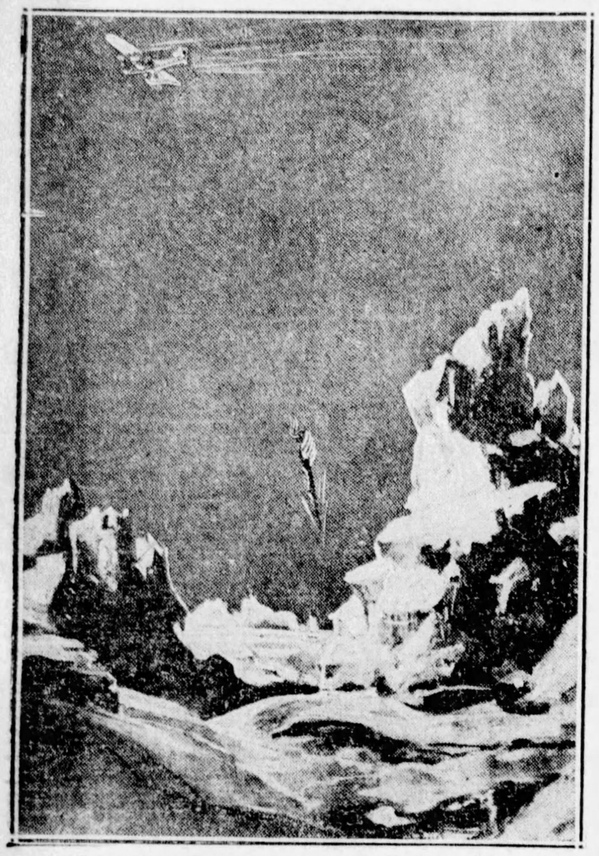
Good Old Flag

It Starts, It Finishes.



COMMANDER BYRD DROPPING THE AMERICAN FLAG AT THE NORTH POLE

This little picture reproduces inadequately a fine painting by Einar Kverne, copyrighted by the U. S. Printing and Lithographing Company.

It is a picture, original or lithographed, that every patriotic America would like to frame and hang up where the children could see it.

Among all flags, the Stars and Stripes was first at the North Pole. First, Peary took it on foot, after years of determined struggle.

And then Byrd, courageous young aviator from Virginia, flew over the Pole and dropped another flag, the same fine Stars and Stripes.

This is a picture to make Americans proud, not of themselves, unless they have really DONE SOMETHING, but of their country's flag, and the men like Byrd, who represent the flag so well—some of them going to the North Pole, some of them doing honest, earnest, self-sacrificing and hard work here at home.

Wherever you do GOOD work for this country and for the men and women that live in it, you are doing good work for that flag.

There are other good flags on this world, flags to be proud of. Our flag, one of the youngest among the flags of great nations, has in its record all that this country can ask.

It has never gone to war, except when attacked. It has never floated above an army fighting in an unrighteous cause.

It represents the most prosperous, most powerful people on the earth.

That we are BETTER than any other race, we cannot say and SHOULD not say it, if we could prove it.

But we have done wonders in our short 152 years of independent national life.

The American flag is one of the youngest among the great flags of the world. How far will it go in glory and honor, if the people of this nation prove worthy of it?

Kipling wrote a magnificent poem about "The Flag of England," filled with patriotism that moves deeply even those of other nations.

The British flag had been torn down in Trafalgar Square by a mob. Kipling wrote that you could not judge the flag of England by Trafalgar Square. You must go far to the Southern Seas, or far to the North, where other flags were not known, and THERE you would find the flag of England.

It was really beautiful, but we can tell Kipling in a most friendly way that the first flag that the REAL far North, the North Pole, peak of the world, ever saw was the Stars and Stripes, and the NEXT flag that the North Pole ever saw was also the Stars and Stripes.

Don't Pick on a Greek

He May Not Like It.

The Greeks were fighters 3,000 years and more ago, and they are fighters still. A bandit planning to hold up a coffee shop, if wise, will first ask "Does a Greek run it?" And if he does, will pass on.

James Tsimanadis, whose ancestors watched the building of the great temple overlooking Athens, was just closing up his coffee shop when four young bandits pointed their guns at him.

He replied by throwing heavy plates at their heads with much force until they shot him dead.

They ran away, the police found him with the money untouched. It was only $20, but the bandits did not get it. Don't pick on a Greek. He will fight for his $20.

Last Dying Words

Who Will Send a Message After Death?

William M. Jones, 50 years old, bond salesman out of work, decided to leave a world that wouldn't support him and wrote down his sensations as he died by inhaling gas.

He said, among other things, "if humans had the sterling qualities of dogs in their faithfulness and friendship, this would be a fine world to live in."

It is the selfishness of human beings, however, that pushes them ahead. Selfishness is the corner stone of progress.

Many have written their dying sensations. What the world wants is a few lines of genuine writing sent back from the other side of death.

Fifty words would be enough to tell the world fifty millions times more than it knows now.

DR. VICTOR PIETSCHMANN, of the Vienna Museum of Natural History, advocates the use of X-ray photography, on a scale and in a manner not hitherto undertaken, for the study of the internal organization of animals and plants. He has recently applied this method, through the co-operation of the Queens Hospital and the Bishop Museum of Honolulu, and found his anticipations realized by intraregarding pictures of fishes, and from his descriptions one would be led to expect an immense advance in physiological and biological knowledge through a general adoption of his plan.

The object is not to trace the marks of internal disease, but to obtain photographs of the interior structure of animals in full health, showing every bone, even the smallest, exactly in its natural place with reference to the rest of the skeleton and the soft parts of the body. More than this, by means of injections into the heart and the larger vessels photographs of the capillary vessels may be obtained which are clear in the minutest detail. In a similar way the forms and natural positions of other internal cavities may be pictured. Dr. Pietschmann says he knows a distinguished scientist whose studies of the human heart demanded years of his time. One of these X-ray pictures would have shortened the length of the investigation to a few hours.

It is probable that a careful development of the art of "roentgenography" will render it possible to picture in detail the arrangement of the softer parts of the body, for Dr. Pietschmann remarks that even in the ordinary X-ray picture the soft parts appear on the negative with varying degrees of intensity. The air bladder of fishes, for instance, appears very clear and sharply defined, especially if the photograph is made soon after the death of the animal.

In his work at Hawaii Dr. Pietschmann was able in a short time to obtain X-ray representations of the internal structure of the majority of the Hawaiian fishes, an undertaking that would have consumed years by the ordinary methods of dissection, without producing equally accurate results in the end.

The study of the skeletons of fossilized animals, especially fishes, is likewise facilitated and improved in accuracy by the use of roentgenography. A curious revealing effect is produced by such photographs, through the suggestion which they give of the complete form of the fish when clothed with its flesh. "An X-ray picture," says Dr. Pietschmann, "resembles a fossil much more than a skeleton without any of the soft parts could possibly do. While these parts are rather dim on the negative, they are sharply circumscribed and remind one of the shape of the fossilized animal, whose outlines and soft parts of the body can only be distinguished by a discoloration of the stone" (in which the fossil was embedded).

The method applies as well in the study of plants. In many biological researches "a picture may save months of painstaking technical work, while for students it would save the laborious work of microtomy and the subsequent reconstruction of organs from sections. By this method many a valuable organism can be kept intact that otherwise would have to be sacrificed for the purpose of study."

Thus science makes the invisible seeable, and lifts the veil from that which is hidden.

Continual Holidays

ONE of the jobs of American merchants engaged in foreign trade is to keep track of the holidays in foreign countries, when banks and business houses are closed.

In August, apart from Sundays, there are 20 business holidays in different lands. Monday, August 6, is a holiday in 33 countries. Wednesday, August 15, is a holiday in 46.

The reasons for the holidays vary from the British "bank holiday" of August 6, current in much of the British Empire, to the Philippine Islands' "Occupation Day" on August 13, Yukon Territory's "Discovery Day" on August 17, Iraq's celebration of "King's Accession" on August 23, and Rumania's holiday celebrating the "Decapitation of St. John" on August 29.

So almost any day in August, when you are broiling at your desk, you can get whatever comfort there is in the thought that somewhere there is an entire nation of people with nothing to do but amuse themselves.

Work Hard and Play Hard

HAVE you allowed yourself to think that you are working too hard?

You argue that you must preserve your vitality for the many hard years that are before you.

So you are letting down.

Since you started favoring yourself you know that you have made less and less effort, and as time goes on you are likely to continue to let down till you won't be worth a cent.

The farther you depart from the speed you maintained in former years and the extent of your thought in furthering your job, the easier for you to lessen your efforts in accomplishment.

Has anyone ever suggested to you that you are heading toward the point where you will be succeeded by a more energetic person?

Well, this is the road you are traveling at present.

Why be so afraid of wearing yourself out?

The number of persons who wear themselves out working is far less than the number who actually rust out.

If you take the required rest and play in your leisure time, you need not fear working too hard.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Sea Water

WHAT beauty in sea-water,
The bright and sparkling water
Whose joyous waves go dancing all the day,
With tireless sea-gulls winging
Where salt-sweet winds are flinging
Aloft the snowy banners of the spray!

Great wealth is like sea-water,
Great fame is like sea-water,
A dazzle to the eyes that look thereon;
Lure lies for every fancy
In that bright necromancy,
A lure like that of dancing seas at dawn.

But who would drink sea-water,
Would drink the salt sea-water
That feeds the sight, but leaves the thirst unslacked?
Such drinks are wealth and power,
Which bring but barren dower,
Denying joys for which the heart has ached.

Isn't It So?

Nine-tenths of the born leaders of men are women.

Mighty few welcomes are warranted not to wear out.

Life is full of wasted energy. Many a man who is always on the go never gets there.

* * *

Men will continue to nurse delusions just as long as women continue to coddle pet dogs.

Many a man gets the reputation of being a philosopher by preaching what he doesn't practice.

Great Passages from the Bible

The Reign of Peace

(Micah 4; 1-7)

BUT in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall made them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it.

For all people will walk every one in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever.

In that day, saith the Lord, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted;

And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

LADIES ought to be real careful in their talking about clothes with one another, especially if they're not altogether friendly. Now, there was some women at a bridge party not long ago, and Mrs. James and Mrs. Barlow were talking about their furs for next winter, and neither one of these ladies was very crazy about the other, only they were being awful polite.

"My husband is going to get me some furs, something like them you were going to buy last winter, you know. You were looking at them for quite a while, but didn't get around to buying them, you remember, Mrs. James? Them black and whites ones, you know, that you were talking about. I don't know what kind they were exactly, but they weren't very expensive."

"Oh, you mean skunk," said Mrs. James.

But Mrs. Barlow took it all wrong, and waded right in and pulled the front hair all offen Mrs. James' head.

Friendship and Finance

"JOHN," said the caller at the office of an American film magnate, "I need $500, and if you will indorse this note the bank will let me have the amount immediately."

The film magnate hesitated a moment, the caller was of a rather dubious financial responsibility. Then a happy thought struck him.

"Is that bank manager a personal friend of yours?" he inquired.

"No, not exactly. Why?"

"Well, do you think I'd let you borrow from a strange bank manager? An old friend like you? Certainly not. You have him indorse the note and I'll lend you the money myself."

He Deserved the Girl

JAMES A. DAHLMAN, of Omaha, had just been re-elected as mayor for the seventh time, and at an automobilists' banquet in his honor he said.

"There's good form in riding a horse, and there's just as much good form in driving a motor car. What's prettier to see than a skilful, cool, reckless car driver?

"They tell me that an English lord's daughter jilted an earl last week in order to elope with a Wichita boy who can drive a sixty-horsepower car at top speed with one hand and roll a cigaret with the other."

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Thoughts while strolling: What's become of euchre parties? Mayor Walker's green coupe. Pests who say, "And how!" Harrison Fisher's gray spats. Roy Howard, a Gano, O., boy, who made good in the city. Drug store window sign: "Gin Fizz."

Find a restaurant with a heavy Jewish patronage and you find good food. Steve Hannagan, Gene Tunney's public relations counsel. Oscar of the Waldorf. Resembles a benign and roly-poly apple-cheeked curate. Those houses on the street with half moon driveways.

Val O'Farrell, a detective with a mystery novel name. Why do gardeners always look so surly? Eighteen-year-old lorgnette users. Maybe it's the liquor. Sam Kingston, Forty-second street's beau brummel. One of those inns where Washington "stopped."

Why do hemstitching shops locate upstairs in dingy buildings? Six giggling chorus girls in a roadster—and giving a free leg show. Horse faced men who wear Alpine hats several sizes too soon. Fluffy little dogs yapping from limousine windows.

The big gas tank on Riverside Drive. And tea time at the Claremont—once the home of Theodosia Burr. Grant's tomb and the inscription, "Let Us Have Peace." And the young couples who go there to spoon. The iron fence encircling the grave for "The Unknown Child."

The tree Li Hung Chang planted as a tribute to General Grant. Two churches now going up on the Drive. Dreamers on stone wall benches—gazing all day at the Hudson. Sailor boys on the mash. Bishop Potter's home gone. The Soldier and Sailor Monument.

The mammoth apartment house whose upper floors are occupied by W. R. Hearst. Charles M. Schwab's lawn always looks as though it has just been to the barber. Those retired grumpy army officers with Filipino servants and the gout. The fine old West Seventy-second street residences are now small ships.

Brooklyn may be as the jokesters say, "at the wrong end of the bridge," but it has more personality and genuine charm than the borough of Manhattan. It is the last stand of the old American home in greater New York, having lawns upon which children may play and comfortable porch hammocks for tired mothers.

The beauty of Central Park is overshadowed by that of Brooklyn's Prospect Park. After leaving cramped Manhattan one is impressed by the breathing space across the bridge. There is a commons, for instance, where ten baseball games may be played simultaneously.

There is scarcely a finer roadway in America than Ocean Parkway, the route to Coney Island. It seems as wide as the famous Champs Elysees and is lined with six rows of trees. There is a promenade. Also a bridle path and three different roadways for vehicular traffic.

In the evening husbands are out in their shirt sleeves sprinkling lawns. Mothers in organdie dresses are rocking on porches. Children freshly bathed and scrubbed are riding or driving Shetland ponies. Young men and girls are strolling along shaded streets.

Beyond Brooklyn is Coney Island and beyond Coney is Sea Gate—long reputed but not actually the most exclusive residential section in America. A policeman is on guard at the single entrance to the area and a stranger must give his name and wait for telephonic permission from a resident before entering the sacred portals.

* * *

The most neighborly block in midtown Manhattan is on West Forty-seventh street between Broadway and Sixth avenue. Here men and women are always standing out front or sitting on the stoops of the many dim-lit hotels. Everybody seems acquainted.

* * *

"Knowing you are horse-faced and Scotch," writes someone on the back of a menu, "I presume it was you who licked the grape fruit juice off your spectacles at breakfast in the Biltmore this morning."

That would be me only I don't wear spectacles. And the place would be Childs'.

Parties

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

As near as we can get at the matter people go ahead dividing into two political parties for a similar reason to that for which women wore bustles.

Nowhere in the field of human endeavor is the momentum of tradition more apparent than in politics.

Surely such efficient minds as those of Elihu Root, Gen. Grant, Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith know more than to believe a political party means anything, at least that it means more than a machine to get certain persons elected.

After making platforms and speeches about the Republican and Democratic party they must retire to the privacy of their own closets and have a good laugh.

The main issues upon which this presidential campaign will be decided are "whispering issues." People will vote influenced by what they think on the liquor business or Roman Catholicism or such other issues as the parties have adroitly side-stepped.

Maybe they oughtn't to do this, maybe it is very naughty, but all that does not prevent them from doing it just the same.

When a man has blurted out some damaging fact in his testimony, the judge may rule that the jury should pay no attention to it. But they heard it, and cannot unhear it, and it has its effect, perhaps all the more for their being warned against it.

There recently was a meeting of political scientists representing 48 universities and colleges in America, held at Des Moines.

They claim that the present presidential campaign will signalize in American history the collapse of the two party system.

Prof. Munro of Harvard declared "issues do not separate the two parties vertically. They break up each party horizontally in blocks, based on economic interests and social advantage and disadvantage."

These blocks, they say, will replace the machinery for the election of the president every four years.

Perhaps the scientific gentlemen are talking through their hats. Common sense usually has a hard time of it when it is opposed by custom, and these scientists show a sort of childlike faith in reason and logic, which is not in accordance with facts.

The political party is here, it is an American institution, it may be bughouse, but it is our own, and it seems to have its grip pretty firmly upon all classes of people.

Instead of its being a credit to a man to change his political affiliations it is looked upon as a sort of disgrace. If he is a Democrat he must never become a Republican, just as a Methodist should never become a Presbyterian.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

MRS. LUCY FISHER ROMARE, poet, is past 90 and she is making public speeches and publishing books. There aren't any more old ladies in starched white aprons sitting in windows after the housework is done watching the world go by. Wherever the world goes, they go. Happier, healthier, prettier and infinitely more interesting old ladies.

A coupla wives came home unexpectedly from the seashore and found their husbands killing their loneliness. Part of the evidence in the divorce suits will be lipstick marks on the linen.

Last week cosmeticians advised all wives to use more powder and lipstick to keep husbands interested.

And some wise somebody wrote this:

"Precious fingers, precious toes,
Precious eyes and precious nose,
Precious chin and precious lip,
Precious fool that lets them slip."

A girl pilot in an old-fashioned building in New York, in one of these tired old elevators that take 10 minutes to get you to the top floor. She is reading a novel. She starts the elevator and then takes the novel off the stool. She reads, maybe one paragraph, maybe two, while the elevator goes up, and probably the same amount while it goes down.

"Get much reading done that way?" I asked.

"Yes, quite a bit," she told me, not looking up from the book.

Speaking of elevator pilots—

A girl got into the elevator on the fifth floor of a millinery establishment. The pilot was a dark, sinister looking man like many of these wholesale districts discover. Thinking, probably, that she'd like to stir a smile on this frightfully hot day, she said to the dark man: "Is it raining now?" It had rained when she came in.

"No, snowing."

She was silent a minute, and he said in a mean voice: "What do you want, rain, rain, rain all the time?"

An exceedingly pleasant colored girl named Nellie was asked to prepare a fine dinner for Friday night. Company coming.

"But, Miss Florance, that's my lodge night," she said in her soft musical voice.

"What lodge, Nellie?" asked the amused employer.

"Oh, this is 'The Samaritans'," said Nellie. "I belong to four others."

"Four?" said the astonished hostess.

"Yes 'em, but that ain't many. My sister-in-law, she belongs to 19."

"But why?" said the lady.

"Well," Nellie told her, "they are mighty nice, and then if you gets sick you gets as much as $32 a year and if you DIE (brightening), why you get as much as $212!"

But, before the conversation ended, Nellie said there was just one thing that she wanted most to be and she'd give up all the lodges to be that.

Asked what, Nellie said: "I wouldn't care if I couldn't be nothing else if I could just be an ELK."
